The Russian strategic nuclear submarine Dmitry Donskoy successfully launched the new Bulava ballistic missile in the White Sea Wednesday morning.

The missile hit a target at the Kura firing range on the Kamchatka Peninsula, the Russian Navy's Captain Igor Dygalo told Ekho Moskvyy radio.

"This was the first underwater launch of a Bulava missile and the second launch conducted as part of a series of tests of the missile," he said.

The Dmitry Donskoy carried out the first test surface launch of a Bulava missile from a point in the White Sea on Sept. 27, 2005.
