CAMERA - The Committee for Accuracy in Middle East Reporting in America - reports that it has closely tracked media coverage of Israel and the Middle East for over 20 years, "contacting countless outlets with questions about factual accuracy and in many instances eliciting corrections." The Israeli Hebrew daily Haaretz, however, ignores CAMERA's queries, the organization says.

Yes, they are a horrible group that suppresses via harassment... they are a special interest group run by Rabbis, etc. And their interest is to squash agencies that dare to report accuracy that shows Israel in a negative light.

Why is it all necessary?

If what Israel is doing is just and right, then why are AIPAC and all of the other pro-Israel lobbies, thinktanks, media watchdog organizations, Hasbara committees, and all of the time, effort and money spent on trying to influence the people and the government of the United States of America necessary?

And why does the United States stand virtually alone in the world in its unwavering support of Israel?

Are the two connected?

Methinks so.

My recent favorite CAMERA harrassment was when they made a college newspaper's editor apologize for the below piece and had it pulled from the site. Had Caelan MacTavish written a column that misrepresented Palestinians, the Committee for Accuracy in Middle East Reporting in America wouldn't have said a word.

"Take your God and shove it" is classic.

Wars have been fought over Jerusalem since its inception. It is a city that is holy to three major world religions. The Jews want Jerusalem because it is the city that King David ruled ancient Judea from. The Muslims want Jerusalem because it was there the prophet Mohammed ascended into heaven. The Christians want Jerusalem because they have always wanted the Holy Land. Maybe nobody should have it.

Currently, Jerusalem is deep inside the West Bank, and may be the single biggest impediment to a two-state solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

After the Diaspora, or scattering, Jews left their ancient seat of government and went all across Europe. Then the Holocaust came, the Great Burning, and Jews started to leave the Europe that hated them for centuries because of their exclusive religion. Nobody can really convert to Judaism — you are born Jewish, or you are not.

The Jews did not like to integrate with other peoples. When the Greeks met the Egyptians, they said, "Oh, your Ammon is our Zeus. We worship the same gods. Let's feast together and exchange presents." When the Greeks met the Jews, the Jews told them, "No, our God is not your God. Our God belongs to us alone. Take your God and shove it."

People didn't like Jews because of this; they feared whatever secrets their exclusive god might be hiding. Scholars think this attributed to the hereditary prejudice against Jews, and in response, Zionism attracted the scattered Jews back to the land their ancient kingdom once rested upon. Israel was formed.

Instead of keeping the barriers put in place by the United Nations after the Six-Day War, in 1967, Israel proceeded to grab as much land as possible over the last century. Crazy religious zealots believe that the entire realm of Palestine is theirs, since an ancient book says an invisible being in the clouds gave it to them. This argument doesn't hold up too well in real estate law. Try it sometime.

But the crazy religious zealots, affectionately termed "settlers" by sympathetic press, go and squat on occupied Palestinian orchards, cut down all the trees, and built a little town. The Palestinians get upset, and the Jews take all the water and resources. Leaving Palestinians in little more than cages is not an appropriate act for a race released from concentration camps. But, monkey see, monkey do.

The new apartheid wall is not helping things either. This wall cuts off some Palestinian towns entirely from anything else — jobs, commercial centers, roads, everything. Left with no options (Palestinians are not citizens, cannot vote, and have no rights) some people are blowing themselves up.

Why can't they work it out? Both sides claim Jerusalem as their own city.

Dividing a city didn't work with Berlin. Some proposals to separate Jerusalem between Israeli and Palestinian sectors have been floated, but they have fallen apart due to the inability to agree on who gets what. Temple Mount is a site claimed to be holy by three different religions. Which one should get exclusive rights to it?

This issue was always settled with war before the present time. That hill has seen bloodshed because everybody wants it.

Let's take Jerusalem away from both Israel and Palestine, and give it to the United Nations. They can move their headquarters from New York, since the United States doesn't really like the U.N. anyway. John Bolton, the U.S. ambassador to the U.N., has a stated purpose to see the U.N. destroyed.

If Jerusalem were made an international city, free from all of the battles and wars that have consumed the Middle East for millennia, and turned into a diplomatic center, then there would be a viable chance for a peaceful resolution.

Everyone agrees that the U.N. is in need of reform. What better way to usher in reform than to move everything, offices, files, people, and all to a new city on the other side of the world?

And what better city to be the host of a diplomatic organization so committed to the best interests of the world? We could even build the new U.N. building squarely on the Temple Mount. Diplomacy, and peaceful negotiation, would become a holy act. Who could argue with that?
