John Kerry to call for impeachment of George Bush

6/4/2005 3:45:00 PM GMT

John Kerry announced Thursday that he intends to present Congress with The Downing Street Memo, reported last month by the London Times. The memo purports to include minutes from a July 2002 meeting with Tony Blair, in which Blair allegedly said that President Bush's administration "fixed" intelligence on Iraq in order to justify the Iraqi war.

The Downing Street Memo is the leaked secret British document that details the minutes of a 2002 meeting between top-level British and American government officials. The memo states that George Bush "was determined" to attack Iraq long before going to Congress with the matter, and that "the intelligence and facts were being fixed around the policy."

So far neither government has disputed the accuracy of the memo.

The memo caused an uproar in Britain and made a significant impact in the British national elections, but has received President Bush could be impeached following publication of the Downing Street Memo.

The Boston Globe published an article by Ralph Nader, Tuesday, in which Nader also called for President Bush's impeachment. The story is being carried on Michael Moore's website and the Democratic Underground.

Failed presidential candidate Kerry advised that he will begin the presentation of his case for President Bush's impeachment to Congress, on Monday.

Kerry said of the memo: "When I go back [to Washington] on Monday, I am going to raise the issue. I think it's a stunning, unbelievably simple and understandable statement of the truth and a profoundly important document that raises stunning issues here at home. And it's amazing to me the way it escaped major media discussion. It's not being missed on the Internet, I can tell you that."

He questioned Americans' understanding of the war and the idea that criticism equals disloyalty, saying, "Do you think that Americans if they really understood it would feel that way knowing that on Election Day, 77 percent of Americans who voted for Bush believed that weapons of mass destruction had been found and 77 percent believe Saddam did 9/11? Is there a way for this to break through, ever?"

House Representative John Conyers has written to the President regarding the memo:

"...a debate has raged in the United States over the last year and one half about whether the obviously flawed intelligence that falsely stated that Iraq possessed weapons of mass destruction was a mere 'failure' or the result of intentional manipulation to reach foreordained conclusions supporting the case for war. The memo appears to close the case on that issue stating that in the United States the intelligence and facts were being 'fixed' around the decision to go to war."

There is a growing movement on the internet and in Congress for a "Resolution of Inquiry" into issues surrounding the planning and execution of the Iraq war, especially in regard to the Administration's handling of intelligence.

John Dean, a key Watergate figure, wrote in a June 2003 column for a legal website, that, "To put it bluntly, if Bush has taken Congress and the nation into war based on bogus information, he is cooked... Manipulation or deliberate misuse of national security intelligence data, if proven, could be a 'high crime' under the Constitution's impeachment clause."

However, in practical terms impeachment in the U.S. Senate requires a 2/3 majority for conviction, which is unlikely given that 55 out of 100 Senators are Republican.

When asked about the Downing Street Memo on May 23, White House spokesman Scott McClellan said: "If anyone wants to know how the intelligence was used by the administration, all they have to do is go back and look at all the public comments over the course of the lead-up to the war in Iraq, and that's all very public information. Everybody who was there could see how we used that intelligence.

"And in terms of the intelligence, it was wrong, and we are taking steps to correct that and make sure that in the future we have the best possible intelligence, because it's critical in this post-September 11th age, that the executive branch has the best intelligence possible."

i said this exact statement just two days ago. i used the term "conspiracy" to attack iraq. i also said that bush disgraced the public trust by providing false intelligence and lies to the american people. i also said bush should be impeached for his crimes. certainly if impeachment can be brought against a president for a simple blow job, than a president who puts the us in danger is a greater threat and disgrace to his office. i am in favor of bush being removed from office whether by impeachment or force coming from kerry is a laughable and a cheap shot. kerry is the guy who was photographed cycling and skating on his presidential elections while the us is at war. kerry had ten thou lawyers working on his campaign and did not use them knowing that there were many voting inconsistencies. kerry is a not an idiot to handle the elections the way he did. hence, i strongly think he deliberately took a fall for bush. not using his lawyers when they were needed and relevant and coming back now to have a go at bush is a bit suspicious. i think that kerry is trying to project rivalry to wipe out any traces of a deal which could have been cut during elections, nothing more. kerry knows very well that the congress would not approve such call, he just trying to look like a rival, which he has never been or intended. kerry, who are you kidding?

"thus, by applying the biosafety standards of developed countries it is not always possible to reach conclusions on the type of biological activities being carried out elsewhere." a very strong statement. explosives on their own are not considered a weapon due to the lack of a delivery system. if you add a kid, it is still not a weapon according to most standards. but if you add a total indifference to human life, then what have you got? well you read stories here also.

impeachment is a long process and never is successful in any country in the history of this world. all they do is talk, they failed to impeach nixon, who did the most ungentleman's act in bugging his opponents part office. then comes the extraordinary scandal in the most venerable office in this world the oval office withg cigars and all, but failed. the reason is that the laws are so made by politicians who fool the voters all the time to go through an impossible series of hearings and voting that can never be finished, as the buck will stop before it reaches it's destination however criminal a president has been. this is american justice to suit the leaders. murder is a prime reason for impeachment and every president has ordered a killing of foreigners outside thier jurisdiction and is it not murder with mens rea ?

what the americans and the west dont understand is that the imperialist american government is on an ambitious policy of world conquest through military and covert means. america is after the world's most oil rich regions of the world. these include the middle east and the caspian region and straight into the former soviet republic's. america is interfering in the caspian sea region with accelerating its aggressive isolation of iran and russia. one example is azerbaijan, they are negotiating to put an american military base there against iran. when the tulib revolution in kyrgyztan occured, rumsfeld rushed there to ensure that america will be keeping its military outpost there. but with russia under pressure, russians along with china and iran have formed an aliance to resist the american imperialist ambitions. the new world order is set. america all alone russia, iran, and china the greatest of allies. through india into this aliance u get something too powerful for america to handle.

we t be aware that kerry is as much a supporter of american empire as bush is. the difference between the two is that kerry wants the traditional monied elite wall street to control the empire while bush wants to redefine and shift the american power base to the corporation. of the two, i prefer bush because of his sheer incompetence. while bush fiddles in iraq, the rest of the world is pushing back and redefining the frontiers of empire.

i hope kerry goes through with it and that impeachment articles are drawn up. at the very least it will draw attention in the u.s. and elsewhere to the illegality and immorality of the u.s. invasion of iraq. no other american president has ever deserved impeachment more than gwb. i doubt that impeachment will take place, but at the very least americans especially need to know that bush contrived this war, and roughly 100,000 people have suffered so greatly from. every american should raise their voice against bush and the criminals who motivate him.

kerry is a fool he is look for publicity he know there is no way that a impeachment will happen. the republican control both houses in congress and no republican will impeach a republican president because it weakens the party that they belong. first impeachment can only happen in the house of representatives and kerry is a senator not a representative. i am sure kerry can get one of his friends in the house to call for impeachment but this has already happened and it was voted down and the same will happen this time. nobody is going to take impeachment seriously of the iraq was because bush is right about this war. the only lie here are the people that say bush lied, that is a lie. when this is all over years from now there will be a statue of president bush somewhere in baghdad maybe where saddam old statue was.
