Dead Russian Spy was israeli Double Agent

Murdered Russian ex-spy Alexander Litvinenko passed documents to former Yukos CEO in Israel months before his death . . .

November 25, 2006, 9:10 AM (GMT+02:00)

Leonid Nevzlin, former CEO of the oil giant and current chairman of the Diaspora Museum in Tel Aviv, says the former Russian spy came to Israel with classified documents on Yukos which may be damaging to Russian leaders. Nevzlin estimates that Litvinenko's death was connected with this information, which he has handed to London police investigators of the murder.

DEBKAF's intelligence sources add that the Russian ex-spy is believed to have been a double agent, who sold trade secrets to different parties in and outside Russia, among them some of the Russian oligarchs living in exile in the West. Litvinenko served as a colonel in a Russian Federal Security Services unit which investigated and carried out special operations against businessmen.

British police found traces of the radioactive Polonium 210 in Litvinenko's urine.

The London media accuse Vladimir Putin of being behind the murder which they claim was politically-motivated.

Sure as heck puts israeli relations with Russia in a whole new different light.

Litvinenko - By Way Of Deception

Yes, it seems that a number of people are asking the same questions:

{{ Thinking logically about it, or rather, thinking 'conspiratorially' about it (since this is, after all, a very clear case of conspiracy) it is far more plausible that Litvinenko's murder was carried out by an enemy of Putin. As with all cloak and dagger cases, in the absence of any empirical evidence, the closest approximation to the truth is generally achieved by asking "who benefits?"

Consider how utterly masochistic the Putin government would have to be to murder a man who had been publicly attacking Putin himself. Consider further how amazingly crass it is for Putin, having supposedly decided that Litvinenko had to be "taken care of" to opt for a method of assassination that was absolutely certain of being identified as poisoning. Has the Russian SVR (Foreign Intelligence Service) never heard of "accidental death"? What about a "heart attack"? For god's sake, even pushing the man under a number 9 bus would have been less obvious than poisoning him with an "extremely rare radioactive isotope".

Consider the Israeli Mossad. According to ex-Mossad officer Victor Ostrovsky, the fine upstanding members of Israel's 'cut-throat incorporated' have made covert assassination into a fine, if very unsavory, art form. For example, there was the case where the 'assassinee', who was laid up in a Belgian hotel room, was given a sedative in his drink to first render him unconscious at which point a group of Mossad operatives entered his room, stripped him naked, inserted a tube into his anus, inserted several tablets into the tube which raised his body temperature to dangerous levels, before dumping him in a bath full of cold war. The result? The man was found the next morning in his bath having suffered an "obvious" and verifiable "heart attack".

Do you think the SVR would not capable of something similar if the need arose? }}

Putin, or some other interested patriots is/are purging Russia of the Yeltsin oligarchs. Unfortunately most of them are Jewish but that is not the reason for their demise, the reasons are more in the realm of economics than biology. Anyone knowing Russia would have known this days ago.

This is what should be done to ALL spies, no matter who they claim to work for. Spies are professional liars. What hubris makes one believe that a professional liar will tell the truth to only him?

The British in NYC had a perfect punishment that, with a small addition, would be appropriate for spies. First the traitor is hanged. While he is hanging, you gut him with a sharp blade. You then pull him down from the gallows and draw and quarter him. Then you behead the torso. The additional punishment needed is to burn the corpse/body parts and dump the ashes into the bottom of a cess pit. Burned ashes at the bottom of a cesspit is the fate that ALL spies deserve.
