At least one Palestinian child was killed and seven others injured when an Israeli warplane Tuesday fired an air-to-ground missile onto a busy street in northern Gaza, Palestinian sources said.

Medical sources said a seven-year-old boy was killed instantly and seven other children sustained varied injuries when the hellfire missile hit a crowded street at the Jabalya refugee camp in northern Gaza.

The Israeli army said a car carrying resistance fighters was targeted while traveling in the crowded Jabalya refugee camp in northern Gaza.

Israel's channel 2 TV described the latest killing as "another failed assassination attempt, and again innocent civilians were killed."

On Friday, June 9, the Israeli occupation army massacred an almost entire Palestinian family of seven people who were picnicking along the Gaza beach.

The Zionist regime and army refused to take responsibility for the pornographic murder, accusing the Palestinians of responsibility.

Since the outbreak of the Palestinian Intifada, or uprising, against the Israeli military occupation of Palestine nearly six years ago, the Israeli army and paramilitary Jewish terrorists have killed over 800 Palestinian children.

Thousands of other children and minors have also been killed and maimed by what human rights organizations, including Israel's own B'tselem group, call Israeli indiscriminate killings of Palestinians.
