

Iran says ready to combat electronic warfare

Sat Mar 4, 7:54 AM ET

TEHRAN (AFP) - Iran owns advanced technology in electronic warfare and can combat any such attacks on its military equipment, the head of defense ministry electronics industries revealed.

"If our main enemy wants to carry out electronic warfare and jamming operations, our standards are at the NATO level," Ebrahim Mahmoudzadeh told state television on Saturday.

He was also quoted as saying that Iran's radars, passive and active electronic protection "can combat anything that wants to harm us".

In recent months Israel has been dangling the threat of preemptive action to stop Iran's disputed nuclear program -- seen by the West as a mask for weapons development.
