Dear Curt,

This is for your project – since you are a “soccer dad, and your children are active soccer players, you may find some of the enclosed observations of interest. The “unexpected” side effects of soccer in Germany, with the World Cup being hosted here is truly something to behold. It is a nostalgic time for me, for this is the first time I have been in my homeland in fifty-two years and my nation is hosting the World Cup, I am seeing signs of life, pride, and joy that I haven't seen among my kin in many years – and it has everything to do with this soccer phenomenon.

The first and last time I was involved in anything like this was when I was fifteen years old and the legendary Fritz Walter of Kaiserlautern was the German team's captain – which beat Hungary in 1954, we Germans refer to this victory as “Wunder von Bern,” or the Miracle of Bern, which by the way recently became the title a best selling book and box office smash. At the time I can distinctly remember how a collective sigh of relief of exhaled by 80 million Germans in the east and west, and millions of Germans in Austria, Switzerland, and overseas in Canada, America, Argentina, the joy was palpable.

As I am writing this line, I can remember how the victory affected me, my school chums, siblings – we were elated, transformed actually, by that game, I can remember that game as if it were played yesterday!
It was if a very heavy weight were lifted from the collective shoulders of the worlds Germans.

It is difficult for a victor nation like America to relate to Germans and how this psychically devastating feeling we have embraced, related to our capitulation and the lies fabricated by the victors. In a small sense Americans know this feeling as it relates to Vietnam, it was an unpopular war, the entire population wasn't behind it, feelings of guilt
