Pay No Attention to The Soldier Saying the Government is Lying about 9-11

By Curt Maynard

Can't you just see some producer at Fox News calling his friends at CNN, MSNBC, the New York Times, the Washington Post, CBS, ABC, and NBC confidently telling them it's time to arrest Warren Jeffs, the Mormon polygamist, who has allegedly been dodging federal authorities for the last few years? I can - I can see them calling their allies at the FBI, who have known where Jeffs has been for a long time and telling them, "since the titillating JonBenet Ramsey case is over, why don't you arrest Jeffs now, and we'll plaster his face all over every television in the United States, and over every front page in the print media for the next four months in order to keep America's mind off issues that really do have some importance."

The American media is worse than worthless, I strongly encourage you to turn off your television and find anything else to do with your time. As a student of psychology, the only reason I watch the television these days is to see what the current propagandistic approach [spin] is on any given event and/or issue. Last week it was the JonBenet Ramsey crap, and now it looks like it'll be Warren Jeffs for the next couple of months. I don't care about Jeffs, and neither does the vast majority of Americans, but that doesn't matter, we'll all be forced to hear about him over the next several weeks because the media says that's what we want to see. It's a lot like the Mel Gibson case, according to a Fox News poll, more than eighty percent of Americans literally don't care what Gibson said about the Jews, but we've been forced to hear what the Jewish media thinks about him every day over the last three weeks.[1]

If you've been watching Fox News over the last month, you've probably noticed the pro-Israel commercial inviting viewers to call an 800 number in order to "show their support," for the poor suffering Israelis. I called that number today, 800-225-1119, and asked the woman that answered if she knew of a similar number that I could call in order to show my support of the Lebanese and Arabs in general, she grew very quiet, so I hung up, only to have my phone immediately ring back, suggesting that these folks are getting numerous anti-Israel call ins, and they're trying to intimidate those who don't support the Jewish state. So I called them again and said that as an Anglo-Saxon Protestant, I loathe the Jewish state, recognize it for what it is, a terrorist state, and will never support them. This time, the individual tried to admonish me from a script she had undoubtedly been given by her handlers weeks ago - I hung up again, if I wanted to hear that crap, I'll watch television.

So anyway, I'm on the Internet this morning and reading [imagine that] an article I saw on the most excellent website, <http://www.whatreallyhappened.com/> that was written by investigative journalist Stephen Webster of the Lone Star Icon, entitled "Under Fire! U.S. Army Intelligence Analyst Targeted For Suggesting New Independent 9/11 Investigation," [2] and details the story of an Army Sergeant First Class named Donald Buswell, who is being "investigated for using his government email account to send out messages that could be considered "disloyal to the United States." According to Webster, the military is implying that this Purple Heart recipient "could soon find himself dishonorably discharged, court martialed, or worse." So what did Buswell write in this email? I'm glad you asked, that implies you aren't asleep. Buswell wrote the following:

"I say Occurs razor is the best way to deduce this 'day of infamy'; if you weigh all options, do some simple studying you will see 911 was clearly not executed by some arabs in caves with cell phones and 3 day old newspapers! I mean how are Arabs benefiting from pulling off 911? They have more war, more death and dismal conditions, so, how did 911 benefit them? Answer: It didn't. So, who benefited from 9-11? The answer is sad, but simple; The Military Industrial [sic] Complex... It's not a paranoid conspiracy to think there are conspiracies out there...and, it's not Liberal Lunacy either, nor is it Conservative Kookiness! People, fellow citizens we've been had! We must demand a new independent investigation into 911 and look at all options of that day, and all plausibilities [sic], even the most incredulous theories must be examined." [3]

No wonder the military is investigating Sergeant First Class Buswell; he said the obvious, i.e. "911 was clearly not executed by some arabs in caves," and that Arabs never benefited from the attack, something the media and US Government desperately want you to believe. Buswell's real crime wasn't so much that he believes the above or even that he used his government email account to say so, his real crime was that he had the nerve to say so out loud, to say the same thing that most patriotic soldiers already believe, the United States government is lying about 9-11!

Sergeant Buswell is definitely a hero and patriot - I wouldn't worry too much about him being court martialed and/or discharged dishonorably from the Army, primarily because the US government knows he'd make far more money and become far better known on the national 9-11 skeptics circuit than he will if they keep him safely tucked away in some dark corner at some insignificant post in bugtussle nowhere. The military will definitely attempt to get Buswell to do a "Mel Gibson" to prostrate himself and apologize for his statements and to say he really doesn't believe them. They'll threaten him in every conceivable way in order to force him to do this, but I doubt they'll publicize this case any further with a court martial and/or dishonorable discharge. Buswell is a hero after all; he was wounded in combat and is the recipient of a Purple Heart. How would it look if the US government persecuted such a man? It's been the government and media all along that have foisted the idea on us that Americans that don't "fully support the soldiers," by fully supporting the occupation of Iraq and Afghanistan, aren't exactly patriotic - how would it look if the military were to court martial a Purple Heart recipient for having an opinion?

Lastly, and what I find most interesting about this case, is that a Google News search conducted this morning, reveals that there is not a single mainstream article out there about the Buswell case, not one, except for one article out of Belgium.[4] Now how do you like that? If Americans want to learn anything further about Sergeant Buswell, they'll have to read it in a Belgian paper.

Just in case any reader would like to send the Colonel, Luke S. Green, that initiated the investigation of Hero First Class Buswell an email, here is the only private email address I could find on the Internet that belongs to the loser Colonel Green. greenl@stc.net [This email address was used by Green in 1997]

Wake up America, you're being taken for a ride.

This is actually a positive development in several ways:

First, it means that there is active dissent within the military ranks. This means that not all soldiers have been completely brainwashed and that their basic American values have not been lost to the fascist indoctrination of the US military and its propaganda arm (Fox, CNN, MSNBC, CBS, ABC, NY Times, etc.)

Second, it means that the government has an active and pervasive fear of having the official conspiracy theory about 9/11 examined closely. If the same group of over-optimistic idiots that thought Iraqis would welcome our soldiers with open arms and flowers think the official 9/11 lie is on shaky ground, what does that say for its chance with ordinary people who possess ordinary logic unblinded by ideology?

Finally, it serves as de facto proof that the official 9/11 conspiracy theory is nonsense. No one in history has EVER been jailed for disagreeing with official dogma when that dogma was true. From Gallileo to Ernst Zundel to David Irving to Donald Buswell, if you got in trouble for saying something, you must have said the truth. It is only when power is based on lies that jails and courts are used to silence dissenting opinions.

So this just shows how thin really is the web of lies that holds th US government in place. As George HW Bush said, "If the people knew what we did, they'd take us out in the streets and lynch us."

For once in his murderous life he told the truth.

As a Briton & an ethnic (secular) Muslim I would just like to add my support to this fine soldier who exemplifies the Stauffenberg spirit of patriotism, in standing up to tyranny from within as well as from without.
