Virginia Training Manual Lists Property Rights Activists As Terrorists

Says video cameras, binoculars, sketch pads are terrorist tools

Paul Joseph Watson/Prison Planet.com | March 28 2006

A Virginia training manual used to help state employees recognize terrorists lists anti-government and property rights activists as terrorists and includes binoculars, video cameras, pads and notebooks in a compendium of terrorist tools.

The manual, discovered by the Virginia News Source, is keen to emphasize that terrorists are not only Middle Eastern in scope and the main focus is afforded to domestic terrorism.

Included with Hamas, Al-Qaeda and Islamic Jihad, the following groups are identified as terrorist organizations.

- In any anti-government and militia movements
- Are property-rights activists
- Are in any racist, separatist and hate groups
- Are an environmental and animal rights activist
- Are a religious extremist
- Are in a street gang

What Are Terrorists After Now?

Terrorists have the following goals in mind when committing their acts:

- Create an atmosphere of anxiety amongst the public.
- Undermine confidence in the government.
- Influence government or social policy.

The unpredictable and random nature of terrorist acts makes it impossible for governments to protect all potential victims.

Presumably, tourists, journalists, hikers, bird-watchers, scuba divers, artists, painters, and anyone who takes a photograph is also now a terrorists according to the official list of terrorist paraphernalia provided
