

WH ORDERS ALL CABINET MEMBERS TO PUT POSITIVE WAR ON TERROR MESSAGE INTO ALL THEIR SPEECHES...

The Washington Post | Al Kamen | Posted May 8, 2006 08:22 AM

READ MORE: George W. Bush, Iraq

Career appointees at the Department of Agriculture were stunned last week to receive e-mailed instructions that include Bush administration "talking points" -- saying things such as "President Bush has a clear strategy for victory in Iraq" -- in every speech they give for the department.

"The President has requested that all members of his cabinet and sub-cabinet incorporate message points on the Global War on Terror into speeches, including specific examples of what each agency is doing to aid the reconstruction of Iraq," the May 2 e-mail from USDA speechwriter Heather Vaughn began.

Readers' Favorite Comments

jump to full comments listing ↓

This continuing brilliant strategy by the President hardly warrants a story as this tactic obviously reverberates throughout the hearts and/or minds of all right-thinking Americans who continue to be as impressed with the performance of the President as they are with the success of democracy in Iraq.

Those who would criticize the President's tactic in Iraq citing supposed facts and testimonies from principles involved could not be more misguided. Those directly involved will not and can not give an accurate and insightful accounting such as the President. The true picture of Iraq can only be obtained by gazing from a distance such as the President is doing. In fact, the President is so confident of his policies that he does not observe Iraq directly at all but relies solely on his advisers. The President is of course too wise to choose advisers who would be so bold as to not tell the President exactly what he wants to hear. Thankfully, the President possesses the generosity to pass this information along to Americans and tell them as well exactly what they want to hear.

We must never forget that in this pos 9/11 world, the truth and the facts about what is actually going on in Iraq mean nothing. Like the President, we can and must focus only on what we would like to see happen. The President can successfully alter his reality so that Iraq is the greatest example of a forced American-style democracy the world has ever seen. For this achievement the President should not only be praised for all time but have the country of Iraq renamed GeorgeWBush in his honor and erect statues of his likeness throughout the entire country. We also should aspire to alter our reality to see only what the President sees.

Until we as a nation forego our antiquated notion of reality and repeat the Talking Points until we believe them as strongly as the President, then the terrorists will have already won.

”

- MinneapolisMike, 05.08.2006

I'm sure my dad, who, at age 69, has been a farmer all his life, will be THRILLED to hear that the next time he has to attend a USDA sponsored lecture on how to safely apply pesticides to his fields, that he'll also get a dose of Bush talking points on Iraq. Not to mention that I'm sure he'll be pleased to hear about all the "support" we're giving to agriculture in Iraq, as the administration lets our small family farms fail so corporate agribusinesses can take over.

<http://punditmom1@blogspot.com...>

”

- punditmom, 05.08.2006

You'll know it's a good speech when it's stamped "USDA-approved Grade A bull."

”

- SkepticTank, 05.08.2006

Why not just get "TEAM BUSH" tattooed on all government employee's foreheads?

”

- Elucid, 05.08.2006

propaganda is such an ugly word, lets call it Happyspeak instead...

Needless Oil Wars, Religious Fundamentalism, Death, Torture, and Massive Debt make strange bedfellows.

I guess we are down to the hardcore Christian-science-fiction loving, Gay-hating, science-disbelieving, War loving, moralizing, brain-dead, End Times Republican Sock Puppet brigade at this point. Might as well take the gloves off now, no one else is listening.....

”

- Shoggoth, 05.08.2006

More evidence of Dictator Bush. Very Saddam-esque of you Georgie!

”

- mhue, 05.08.2006

OK, it's official. These people really are on drugs.

”

- karmamountain, 05.08.2006

Comments (Page 1 of 5 > »):

More evidence of Dictator Bush. Very Saddam-esque of you Georgie!

By: mhue on May 08, 2006 at 08:58am

Flag: [\[abusive\]](#) [\[best of\]](#)

Gosh this is sickening! Desperation always has that lost-in-the-fourth-quarter bitter stink of sour sweat and panic.

Too late, you shitters. America is waking up and no lullaby of talking points can rehypnotize us now.

By: Darwinita on May 08, 2006 at 09:15am

Flag: [\[abusive\]](#) [\[best of\]](#)

This continuing brilliant strategy by the President hardly warrants a story as this tactic obviously reverberates throughout the hearts and/or minds of all right-thinking Americans who continue to be as impressed with the performance of the President as they are with the success of democracy in Iraq.

Those who would criticize the President's tactic in Iraq citing supposed facts and testimonies from principles involved could not be more misguided. Those directly involved will not and can not give an accurate and insightful accounting such as the President. The true picture of Iraq can only be obtained by gazing from a distance such as the President is doing. In fact, the President is so confident of his policies that he does not observe Iraq directly at all but relies solely on his advisers. The President is of course too wise to choose advisers who would be so bold as to not tell the President exactly what he wants to hear. Thankfully, the President possesses the generosity to pass this information along to Americans and tell them as well exactly what they want to hear.

We must never forget that in this post 9/11 world, the truth and the facts about what is actually going on in Iraq mean nothing. Like the President, we can and must focus only on what we would like to see happen. The President can successfully alter his reality so that Iraq is the greatest example of a forced American-style democracy the world has ever seen. For this achievement the President should not only be praised for all time but have the country of Iraq renamed GeorgeWBush in his honor and erect statues of his likeness throughout the entire country. We also should aspire to alter our reality to see only what the President sees.

Until we as a nation forego our antiquated notion of reality and repeat the Talking Points until we believe them as strongly as the President, then the terrorists will have already won.

By: MinneapolisMike on May 08, 2006 at 09:15am

Flag: [\[abusive\]](#) [\[best of\]](#)

They also asked for all personnel to keep tabs on Charlton Heston's whereabouts for the pending remake of "Soylent Green"

By: wickedgrin on May 08, 2006 at 09:16am

Flag: [\[abusive\]](#) [\[best of\]](#)

Rumsfeld calls for US-controlled worldwide propaganda networks

<http://www.unknownnews.org/0602210217propaganda.html...>

And what wonderful wars they are.

By: Hirnlego on May 08, 2006 at 09:17am

Flag: [\[abusive\]](#) [\[best of\]](#)

Yeah, growing food for america is fighting the war in Iraq...

<http://r2000.blogspot.com...>

By: r2000 on May 08, 2006 at 09:18am

Flag: [\[abusive\]](#) [\[best of\]](#)

OK, it's official. These people really are on drugs.

By: karmamountain on May 08, 2006 at 09:19am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

DESPARATE TO A FAULT!

Why on earth would a Department of Agriculture appointee address this BOGUS "ware on terror"? What this directive does is provide a basis to oust any right-thinking appointee who does not comply with the directive.

Impeach the beast - 666!

By: nofltwit on May 08, 2006 at 09:19am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

Indictment of Rove and many others and the impeachment of Bush is the quickest way to the road to recovery.

The myriad problems with republicans is systemic and will continue unless a balance is returned to congress.

By: nofltwit on May 08, 2006 at 09:21am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

It's the "Hey, look! 9/11, 9/11, 9/11, 9/11, 9/11, 9/11" strategy.

Can't they at least lie about something new? This routine is so 2004.

By: Grunty on May 08, 2006 at 09:27am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

I'm sure my dad, who, at age 69, has been a farmer all his life, will be THRILLED to hear that the next time he has to attend a USDA sponsored lecture on how to safely apply pesticides to his fields, that he'll also get a dose of Bush talking points on Iraq. Not to mention that I'm sure he'll be pleased to hear about all the "support" we're giving to agriculture in Iraq, as the administration lets our small family farms fail so corporate agribusinesses can take over.

<http://punditmom1@blogspot.com...>

By: punditmom on May 08, 2006 at 09:28am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

propaganda is such an ugly word, lets call it Happyspeak instead...

Needless Oil Wars, Religious Fundamentalism, Death, Torture, and Massive Debt make strange bedfellows.

I guess we are down to the hardcore Christian-science-fiction loving, Gay-hating, science-disbelieving, War loving, moralizing, brain-dead, End Times Republican Sock Puppet brigade at this point. Might as well take the gloves off now, no one else is listening.....

By: Shoggoth on May 08, 2006 at 09:35am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

And so it all begins again.

Mission Accomplished. The insurgency is in its last throes. Pay no attention to the man behind the curtain.

Hell, I almost don't blame Bushco for going back to the old mantra. It's worked so many times before. And you can always grow from 32 percent.

By: RavagesOfTime on May 08, 2006 at 09:36am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

The Bush Administration continues to be thwarted by non-Fox News America.

By: Bukharin on May 08, 2006 at 09:36am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

Task for CIA's next chief: push Bush's agenda:

<http://www.csmonitor.com/2006/0508/p01s02-uspo.html...>

Blair: Nuking Iran Would Be Absurd:

http://hosted.ap.org/dynamic/stories/B/BRITAIN_IRAN?SITE=GORBC&SECT...

Seems Bush needs to replace Blair.

By: Hirnlego on May 08, 2006 at 09:37am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

What can the Dept. of Agriculture say their contribution to the PRETENSE that Mr. Bush is winning the war on terror in Iraq is? It's clear Mr. Bush and his party are desperate and clueless. Telling voters that Bush/Republicans are winning the war on terror sends the exact opposite message because so few Americans TRUST Mr. Bush and even fewer Americans TRUST the Republicans in congress. Americans cringe when Republicans PRETEND Bush is competent. Americans cringe while civil war rages in Iraq and Republicans PRETEND that Bush has a plan for victory. Americans cringe when Bush and his fellow Republicans LIE to the American people.

By: osage on May 08, 2006 at 09:39am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

This is just horrible. It is time to remove these thugs. America is in GRAVE danger, as Gore has recently said. GRAVE. Lets roll America

By: Suzanne on May 08, 2006 at 09:42am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

Great idea, Junior! That should significantly reduce the number of our troops comming back in body bags.

By: TheSageOfTinseltown on May 08, 2006 at 09:44am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

Why not just get "TEAM BUSH" tatoosed on all government employee's foreheads?

By: Elucid on May 08, 2006 at 09:44am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

How's this, Mr. President?

Here at the DOJ we have evil doers on the run and are winning the War On Terror!

So far, Scooter Libby has been indicted and we will be bringing Karl Rove to his knees later this week... DEVELOPING

<http://patrickjfitzgerald.blogspot.com...>

By: fitzmas on May 08, 2006 at 09:45am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

But...but...BUT! The world isn't 10,000 years old! You can't talk about Mesopotamian farming in 8500 BC! That's UNCHRISTIAN! Bush Administration formally slams Creationism by discussing facts! The world is only 6,000 years old!

By: Ailei on May 08, 2006 at 09:46am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

The obvious has been overlooked here. This is obviously Tony Snows first act as press secretary. As has been done at Fox any program must have the obligatory compliment to the Bush regime. I think the report card thing is especially priceless. Like Fox employees a bonus can be given for the person getting in the most compliments to Bush in a completely unrelated topic.

By: gibraltar on May 08, 2006 at 09:46am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

The White House has also directed the Postmaster General to order all US mail carriers to 'Say something nice about president Bush and vice president Cheney each time you engage a citizen in conversation'.

Suggested comments: "Good morning, Mrs. Bush, sorry your son made such an ass of himself in his speech last night, but I'm sure Tony Snow knows how to deal with that by now'.

'Gee, Mrs. Cheney, the war with Russia your husband is starting should give a big boost to the economy'.

By: TDoff on May 08, 2006 at 09:46am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

And don't forget to mention the Weapons of Mass Destruction!

By: PhillyCook on May 08, 2006 at 09:52am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

Decidering revealed by the High Father?

By: sona on May 08, 2006 at 09:56am

Flag: [abusive] [best of]

Page 1 of 5 > >>