Oops!!!!. I guess they all don't look alike.

Isn't it amazing how so many of today's problems are the result of yesterdays solutions.

There is also his voice to consider.

Reportedly he had a small high pitched, timid voice except in instances when he was required to show the consternation of his teachers and classmates he affected a low, deep voice that sounded like he Rense is conning the public with this claim.

Absolutely. Have you noticed that his right ear looks the same in both photos. Ears are as unique as fingerprints and tends not to change as do facial features to a point.

He also got a military buzzcut .. The earlier photo was an ID photo or something that was not taken from the camera. Its Cho alright.

In the second photograph, the ears are barely visible, so I don't know how you could possibly

Besides, since when have you become an authority on this, and where did you get the idea

My guess is you read Joe Vialls' piece on the fake capture of Uday and Qusay Hussein and the structures, and you thought you would (badly) apply Vialls' expertise to this story.

Am I right, or am I right?

No, You are not right? I've never heard of Vialls.

You can fairly plainly see the outside of his right ear in the photos. Knowing that the ears are deep-dark secret. Those who keep up with advances in forensics have known this for a LONG quite extensively. Noses tend to widen, lips tend to thin, eyes tend to appear more 'squinted' less.

Looks like the tops of the ears on the right side (as viewed) don't match.

This is probably being turned into a redux of the OBL confession tape aspect-ratio controversy horizontally squeeze the photo on the right for the best match possible and see how it looks

I have tentatively accepted the premise that the two seemingly very different faces are the same person seen at different times, eventually attributing the difficulty to the photo on the left being several years older.

When I said the "Hu" photo showed a "dead-ringer" I was comparing it to the NBC photos.

what is the age/time difference between the pics put on some weight ,change your hair cut take off the eye glasses.... also just the process of going from mid teens to young adult.....
any subjective or objective differences in the pics in question.....

I don't know the dates any of these were taken, unfortunately.

I just can't understand how his right-side ear (as shown in the right-side video-cap) could b left-side ear after he ages a couple of years or so. I don't think the effect is caused by a dar right-side, but I could be wrong. The rest of the original video would resolve that easily eno

We seem to get a lot of left-side ear (I mean his ear on the left side as viewed in the image left-side-image ears are a pretty good match to the ID photo.

I suspect that who Cho's roommates say they "don't recognize him", they mean that they n violently or incoherently, not that they think it's not their roommate in the video.

Is there any evidence that someone was in the room with him, handling the video camera?

Since you're on the case, parsing the "don't recognize him," remarks for everyone, I am no I bet those two are the same person.

If I had to bet, I'd bet they're two different persons.

We need profile shots. It looks like the ears of the video Cho may be positioned further back from that, we really do need to hear something from his family and close friends, so Kudzu authority on the subject.
