Kuwaiti media warns of planned U.S. strike against Iran in Apr.
14:08 | 04/ 04/ 2007

ABU DHABI, April 4 (RIA Novosti) - A Kuwaiti newspaper warned Wednesday that the United States is planning a missile strike against Iran some time in April.

In an editorial citing unnamed Washington sources, As-Siyasa said air-to-surface missiles could be used in U.S. strikes against Iran, but that no ground operation would be launched to avoid casualties among U.S. service personnel.

A political statement announcing the strike will be delivered by President George W. Bush later this month, the newspaper said. It will justify the military action against Iran by the need to enhance security, peace and stability in the Gulf region and in the Middle East, and will reemphasize the danger of Tehran's nuclear program to the United States and its allies.

Iran, blacklisted by Bush as part of what he calls "the axis of evil," will be accused of interfering in Iraqi domestic affairs along with Syria, As-Siyasa said. Other accusations likely to be leveled at the Islamic Republic will include complicity in fuelling conflicts in Somalia, Yemen, Lebanon and Afghanistan, as well as jeopardizing navigation in the Strait of Hormuz, the main passageway for oil tankers carrying Gulf crude to Asian markets.

According to the Kuwaiti newspaper, the U.S. Administration hopes its first military strike against Iran will trigger an anti-government outburst in the Islamic Republic, as there is growing discontent in Iranian society over the policies of "the cruel regime advocating a culture of death."

Times newspaper reported Wednesday.

Citing anonymous sources in Washington, it said that various White House departments had started preparing the political speech to be delivered by the US president later this month, announcing the military attack on Iran.

The speech will provide the 'evidence' and the 'justification' for the US to resort to the military option after failing to persuade Tehran to give up its nuclear ambitions, said the report.

According to the Times, one of the justifications expected in the speech is Iran's alleged role in the killing of American soldiers in Iraq by supporting various militias with money and arms.

The US president's speech will also point to Iran's political interference in Iraq, obviously in cooperation with Syria.

The sources were quoted as saying that US will not resort to a ground attack in order to avoid human losses.

a Manaic President and his Zionist gang.

Its so obvious, missiles as if Irans response will not be total out war, avoiding casualitites, this pure Horse Shit.

How can they avoid casualitites if they attack?. Then they will be attacked everywhere they are?.

Indeed, an Oxymoron is sitting in the White House, who should have been in a straightjacket from the moment he was born.

"culture of death."

by Shillum on 04.04.2007 [17:46]

So Mr. Bush thinks Iran is "the cruel regime advocating a culture of death." And just what is Mr. Bush's culture? It cannot be considered a culture of life. I will say this though, if Mr. Bush is insane enough to ever attack Iran, it is the end for everyone. The world will be over in a downward spiral of poison and murder. I guarantee it.

Who makes this stuff up?

Rest assured, there WILL be US casualties all over the Arab world AND Afghanistan if Amerikkka attacks Iran, especially after the release of the British soldiers today!
