US strike group transits Suez Canal

A US Navy strike group led by the assault ship USS Bataan steamed through the Suez Canal on Tuesday on its way to join the buildup of American forces in the Middle East.

The Bataan, which entered Egyptian waters Monday, spent the night at the Mediterranean harbor of Port Said and was expected to leave the Egyptian part of the Red Sea later Tuesday, a Suez Canal official said, speaking on condition of anonymity as he was not authorized to speak to the press.

The seven-vessel Bataan group includes 2,200 US Marines and sailors, helicopters and Harrier fighter jets, the Navy said in Bahrain.

The US Fifth Fleet, which is based in Bahrain, will be overseeing around 50 warships in the Mideast after the arrival of the Bataan and an American aircraft carrier group in February, said US Navy Lt. Cmdr. Charlie Brown.

The Fifth Fleet normally commands a fleet of about 45 ships, about a third of them from US-allied navies, Brown said.

The Navy is in the midst of a regional buildup, with the group of the aircraft carrier USS John C. Stennis on its way as well as 21,500 US soldiers being sent to Iraq. The carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower is already in the region.

The United States has not had two carriers in the Mideast since the US-led invasion of Iraq in 2003.

The Bataan will join a second amphibious assault ship, the USS Boxer, which was on port visit in Dubai on Tuesday.

Brown said the Pentagon recently extended the tour of duty of the Boxer's US Marine Expeditionary Unit, which is in Iraq.

The Bataan is on a routine six-month deployment to the region to conduct "maritime security operations" which includes boarding and searching ships suspected of carrying terrorists or nuclear components to Iran, the Navy said.

Their vassal USA is following orders.

This could be preparation for Iran invasion

This sounds like an implementation for Iran invasion. Why should U.S. make an attempt to create 21st century empire? Maybe to award it to Israel if U.S. successfully conquers Iran afterward?

Empire-making is based on the ancient concept as early as 2300 BC. I don't think that anyone needs to search for empire expansion any farther; it is already all over the world. Internet is the empire itself.

Despite China's massive censorship and block on the West's Internet connection, this powerful network software will tear down the Great Wall then penetrates its international values into the Chinese readers sooner than later. Shooting against a space satellite is already the out-of-date idea taken from the old-fashioned science fiction novels and films.

Sargon of Akkad (Sargon the Great) was the first king who conquered the known world that stretched from Elam (now Iran/Persia) to Iraq to the Mediterranean sea/north Israel. Why should anyone else make an attempt to copycat his greedy and atrocious method involved in fattening and transcending his kingdom?

3,700 years of copycat backed by false religious propaganda must be ended. 21st century people are growing impatient, tired, and sick of presidents, prime ministers, kings/queens, priests, and other leaders who constantly tinker and exploit on religions, propagandas, markets, and military activities as if these are their financial and political hobbies.

Unfortunately, global confusion and conflict will be sustained until the original foundation of the Western religions (Mithraism, Christianity, Islam and Judaism are derived from Zoroastrainism) is finally wrecked by an oncoming future war, if Israel and U.S. decide to attack on Iran.

Without Zoroastrianism, Mesopotamian religion and Sargon of Akkad's legend, it would be no Persian empire, Roman empire, Greek mythical beliefs, Han Dynasty (dogma of empire-making, via Alexendera the Great's incessantly successful campaigns/Roman empire, infected China) , Mithraism, Christianity, Islam, Jewish pseudonyms and Judaism.

So, it makes sense that the Persian divine problems (Jewish belief, which was created by greedy kings and priests, originated from the Persian belief and Sargon of Akkad - my theory), which affected the West, Middle East, and East for two thousand years, are being bounced back to return to their original creator - Iran, after all of oceans, islands, seas, lakes, bays, straits, canals, and continents were already mapped to be known to the world.

Then it will be just Israel - Judaism, U.S. - Christianity, and Iran - Islam which are having a major religious clash.
