Former

Hollinger Exec Says (ex-Bilderberger) Conrad Black Reprimanded Him for Trying to Warn Board

Published: May 23, 2007 11:54 AM ET - Associated Press

CHICAGO A former Hollinger International Inc. executive testified that media mogul Conrad Black angrily reprimanded him for trying to warn a member of the board of directors that a rebellion was brewing among the company's shareholders.

Paul Healy, former vice president of investor relations of the newspaper holding company, said Tuesday that he urged two executives to tell former Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson how shareholder displeasure with Black's management decisions flared up at a May 2002 shareholders meeting.

Black was upset about his efforts, Healy testified in his second day on the witness stand at the millionaire media baron's federal fraud trial.

"Mr. Black was angry at me," Healy said. "He said that I had overstepped my bounds, that 'this is my company. I am the controlling shareholder and I'll decide what the governor needs to know and when.'"

Healy said the shareholders' meeting was the most contentious in his experience at the company. But he said that when Black met that afternoon with Thompson, the chairman of the audit committee of the board of directors, the Hollinger CEO mentioned nothing about the morning's uproar.

Black, 62, and three other men are charged with swindling the big media holding company out of $60 million by pocketing payments from purchasers in a large-scale selloff of hundreds of Hollinger community newspapers across the United States and Canada.

The payments were in exchange for promises not to compete with the new owners. Prosecutors say the money should have gone to the shareholders.

Black and his co-defendants say they did nothing illegal.

But major investors such as executives of the Tweedy Browne mutual fund company questioned Black in strong terms at the shareholders meeting about both the so-called non-compete payments and sizable management fees paid by Hollinger to Ravelston, a small, Toronto-based company.

Top Hollinger executives when Black was chairman, including Black himself, were not actually employed by Hollinger but by Ravelston. Ravelston was largely owned by Black and provided management services to Hollinger International in return for the fees.

While jurors heard a tape of the May 2002 meeting where shareholders intensely questioned Black about the payments, U.S. District Judge Amy J. St. Eve ruled they could not hear the toughest criticisms, which came from investor Edward Shuffro, who warned the Hollinger chairman that investors "consider you a thief."

"Sell your shares and get out," Black told Shuffro. "If you think I'm a thief, go. I'm not going anywhere." Jurors didn't hear that either but the exchange was quoted in court papers filed in pre-trial skirmishing.

Healy's testimony was spiced with colorful Black remarks. In a pre-meeting memo, Black called the unrest "an epidemic of shareholder idiocy."

After the meeting, Healy said, he and Black met with a group of prospective investors who asked about the payments as well as executive perquisites such as use of the corporate jet.

"I can have a 747 if I want," Healy quoted Black as telling them. The investors decided against buying shares in Hollinger, Healy testified.

Healy said after the meeting he brought Hollinger No. 2 executive F. David Radler and corporate counsel Mark Kipnis into his office, shut the door and urged them to "please have a conversation with Gov. Thompson."

"Please tell the governor what happened at the shareholders meeting," Healy recalled saying. He said he checked with Kipnis later to find out if Thompson had been informed and was told "Radler had chickened out."

Radler later was charged in the case, pleaded guilty and testified against Black as the government's star witness in return for a light 29-month sentence. Kipnis is one of three Black co-defendants now on trial.

Jurors later heard a tape of a 2003 shareholder meeting at which the rebellion among major investors in the company went much further.

Before the meeting, Black announced that he had formed a special committee of the board of directors with fresh outside directors, including financial expert Gordon Paris, to look into all the controversies.

At the meeting, Christopher Browne of Tweedy Browne quoted Black as telling people the special committee could not review the non-compete and management fees and that he would not tolerate "an antagonistic forensic scavenger hunt through our company."

Browne termed that "completely unacceptable." He said the non-compete payments and management fees had to be investigated. The special committee did investigate the fees and in November its findings forced Black out as CEO and replaced him with Paris.

22May07 - Significance of Constantinople as this year's venue

As a pivotal point in spiritual history, command centre of the Holy Roman empire later a major objective of the crusades Istanbul is a most significant place to meet. Particularly in a time in the epic East/West War on Terror battle when the Western military adventures in the Middle East have hit the buffers. This fact will be in the forefront of Bilderbergs' minds.

As the so-called war on terror, so favoured by Bilderberg, teeters on the brink of disaster and credibility their task this year, should they chose to accept it, is to bolster the expansion of the US Empire and bring about 'regime change' in Iran by whatever means necessary.

Straddling the Bosphorus, its skyline studded with domes and minarets, Istanbul is one of the truly great romantic cities. Its history tracks back from Byzantium to Constantinople to its place at the head of the Ottoman Empire. Today it hums as Turkey's cultural heart and good-time capital.

How fitting then that those royalty, bankers, media moguls and politicians who believe they are destined to rule the world should chose this city for their dark plans to establish corporate elite global empire. Think big, think Bilderberg!

Istanbul: Queen of Cities

<http://www.petersommer.com/Istanbul.html>

Straddling the continents of Europe and Asia, Istanbul's strategic location has made it a cultural crossroads beyond compare. Its geographical position alone seems to have made it destined to be the capital of a mighty empire. In fact it was the epicentre of two great but very different empires, the Byzantine and Ottoman, for some 1,700 years. Yet even before it ascended the imperial throne it shone as a dynamic vibrant city for almost a thousand years, from the moment it was first founded as the Greek town of Byzantium.....

Istanbul History

<http://www.city-data.com/world-cities/Istanbul-History.html>

Archaeological remains show that people have inhabited the immediate area of present-day Istanbul for tens of thousands of years. A large population lived in the area around 5,000 B.C. Greeks from Miletus and Megara began to settle along the coasts of Bosphorus and the Black Sea during the latter part of the eighth century B. C. According to legend, the colony of Byzantium was founded in 660 B. C. by a Megarian named Byzas. The colony was named after him. Because of its strategic position, Byzantium didn't take long to establish its economic dominance over the region, inviting unwanted attention.....

The History of Istanbul

<http://www.world66.com/asia/middleeast/turkey/istanbul/history>

Byzantium was one of the many colonies founded from the end of the 8th century onward along the coasts of the Bosphorus and the Black Sea by Greek settlers from the cities of Miletus and Megara. In 343 BC Byzantium joined the Second Athenian League, throwing off the siege of Philip II of Macedon three years later. The lifting of the siege was attributed to the divine intervention of the goddess Hecate and was commemorated by the striking of coins bearing her star and crescent. Byzantium accepted Macedonian rule under Alexander the Great, regaining independence only with the eclipse of Macedonian might. A free city under Rome, it gradually fell under imperial control and briefly lost its freedom under the emperor Vespasian. When, in AD 196, it sided with the usurper Pescennius Niger, the Roman emperor Septimus Severus massacred the populace, razed the walls, and annexed the remains to the city of Perinthus (or Heraclea, modern Marmaraereglisi), in Turkey.

- Turkish Press - Bilderberg To Be Held In Istanbul

<http://www.turkishpress.com/news.asp?id=176907>

Published: 5/19/2007

ANKARA - Following are the highlights from today`s Turkish daily VATAN. The Anadolu Agency is not responsible of opinions expressed or the context of the articles and does not vouch for their accuracy:

The annual Bilderberg Meeting, which gathers high level officials from the world business, politics and media circles, will be held in Istanbul this year. The main topics of the meeting are Turkey, Iran and energy issue, Vatan daily writes.

According to the daily, the 3-day meeting is an important event during which participants also determine the following year`s agenda.

According to authoritative sources, the meeting which will be held from May 31st to June 3rd in Istanbul, will mainly focus on issues such as a probable operation against Iran, energy policies and Turkey`s EU membership process.

Previously, two Bilderberg Meetings were held in Turkey, first one in 1959 in Istanbul and the other one in 1975 in Cesme town of Aegean city of Izmir.

According to Vatan, re-choosing Turkey as a venue after 32 years, can be interpreted as "a signal hinting the opening of EU`s doors to Turkey".

During last year`s meeting, Turkey-EU relations were also discussed quite intensely by the participants.

Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, World Bank President Paul Wolfowitz, Former U.S. Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and UNDP Administrator Kemal Dervis are some of the personalities who will attend this year`s meeting.

As U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is responsible for the protection of participants, CIA agents are expected to arrive in Turkey next week in order to cooperate with Turkish officials regarding the security.

KLM accused of helping Nazis flee

08May07 - BBC - Bilderberg Founder accused of helping Nazis flee

'Prince Bernhard, the father of Queen Beatrix, was the director of KLM at the time.'

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/world/europe/6635677.stm>

The Dutch airline KLM is facing calls for an inquiry into reports that it helped Nazi war criminals escape to Argentina after World War II.

According to papers found by Dutch journalists, KLM asked Switzerland to let Germans cross its borders and fly to South America without proper papers.

Suspected war criminals were forbidden from leaving Germany by the Allies.

KLM acknowledges some of its passengers may have been fleeing justice, but denies it sought to help them escape.

A spokesman for the airline, Bart Koster, told the BBC that it was not responsible for carrying out background checks on passengers who had been allowed to leave by the Allies.

Dutch MPs, historians and Jewish groups have demanded an independent investigation into the reports first aired last week, particularly because a member of the Dutch royal family may have been involved.

Prince Bernhard, the father of Queen Beatrix, was the director of KLM at the time.

Mr Koster said KLM did not want to run away from the allegations and was willing to co-operate with any inquiry.

"We would welcome everything which could help clarify what may have happened," he said.

Royal controversy

According to documents found in Switzerland by Dutch TV documentary-makers, a local representative for KLM, Mr Frick, asked the Swiss border police in 1948 to allow his airline's passengers from Germany to enter the country without the proper papers so they could fly to Argentina.

We would welcome everything which could help clarify what may have happened

KLM spokesman

Sander Rietveld from the Netwerk programme said that although the memo from the border police about Mr Frick's visit showed his request had been refused, many Germans were allowed to enter Switzerland without permission.

"The point is that it shows KLM actively approached the Swiss police," he told The Times.

Marc Dierikx, an aviation historian at the Institute for Netherlands History, said other documents showed that many Germans had paid large sums of money to leave the country and that KLM was "intensively involved".

Mr Koster said KLM had no record of a former employee called Mr Frick in its archives, nor evidence that its board had known anything about the allegations.

"We have no information whatsoever that our board was actively involved," he said.

"However, it cannot be excluded that KLM representatives were not involved at a local level."

Experts say more research is needed in Europe and Argentina, because no passenger lists for KLM flights have been kept.

Argentina was notorious for welcoming war criminals into the country when President Juan Peron was in power between 1945 and 1955.

More than 150 Nazis were given refuge - among them Adolf Eichmann, who is considered to have been the chief architect of the Holocaust.

- Black and Browne the deadbeat Bilderbergers

Tony Gosling

One by one they are falling. Both Conrad Black and Lord Browne have both been key Bilderberg props of the last twenty years. But both have recently fallen from grace. Who, we all want to know, will be next?

Both have had their allegedly fraudulent activities covered-up, to a mighty degree, by their vast wealth and the influence it buys them in both the press and the courts. Without the relentless legal actions of the Daily Mail, an activity no other British newspaper appears to have the stomach for, Browne may well have escaped the exposee and subsequent resignation as boss of BP, Britain's biggest company.

This is yet another reason, if any editor or journalist should need one, to be at this year's meeting and to both publish for the public the list of names in attendance as well as a rider... that there will almost certainly be more of the great and the good there than we are being told.

It is time for the end of the Bilderberg sham. The very idea that this is a private meeting of trustworthy types should by now be blown right out of the water. Anyone covering this story up is complicit with the Bilderbergers' mass murderous totalitarian agenda.

The best of the world's alternative press will be in the Roman Emperor Constantine's seat of power for this year's meeting, sharing leaks on the course the world will be taking over the next year, and wondering if another illegal war will be launched by the West against Iran? And those with the power to do or die are there. How can any serious-minded media editor anywhere in the world ignore it.

08May07

- Communique sent to the Turkish Prime Minister re Bilderberg 2007

8th May 2007

Dear Prime Minister,

I am a Turkish filmmaker living in Ireland. It has come to my attention that the Bilderberg Group are holding their next meeting in Istanbul this year, between May 31 and June 3rd.(1) I have known about this group since 1993 and have been following their activities over the past 14 years. According to many sources, since its inception in 1954 by former Nazi S.S. Officer Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands, the Bilderberg Group have been covertly continuing the Nazi policy of creating a New World Order (a global totalitarian dictatorship). (2)

Likely to attend this year's meeting are Paul Wolfowitz, Dr. Henry Kissinger and Donald Rumsfeld:

o As U.S. Deputy Secretary of Defense, Paul Wolfowitz was one of the major architects of the Iraqi War (3) and is still a member of PNAC (Project for a New American Century). PNAC is a neo-conservative think-tank which called for a "catalyzing event" for their policies "like a New Pearl Harbour" exactly a year before 9/11.(4) Mr. Wolfowitz is currently being questioned on charges of corruption and has been asked to resign as head of the World Bank.

o As member of the Steering Committee of the Bilderberg Group, Dr. Henry Kissinger is also likely to attend. According to many sources, Dr. Kissinger is a mass murderer who implemented and defended the decision to run 600 illegal bombing missions in Cambodia ("Operation Menu"), causing the deaths of over 500,000 Cambodians between 1969 and 1973. Under the U.S. constitution, this secret bombing campaign was illegal without U.S. Congressional approval. (5)

Two months after striking a peace accord with North Vietnam in October 1972, he authorised 129 B-52 bombers to bomb North Vietnam for 11 days in a "demonstration bombing" as a public relations exercise to appease South Vietnam (called "The Christmas Bombing").

Former U.S. Ambassador to Indonesia David Newsom, and a Senior CIA Officer both confirm that on December 5th 1975, Dr. Kissinger, along with President Ford, held a meeting in Indonesia with President Suharto. Transcripts of this meeting prove that he gave the greenlight to the subsequent Indonesian Invasion of East Timor. This led to the massacre of over 100,000 Timoreans and violated the U.S. law on arms trade. (6)

Recently, a French judge subpoenaed Dr. Kissinger about U.S. involvement with mass-killings in Chile, Operation Condor and General Augusto Pinochet. He still hasn't attended the hearing and has been evading the subpoena ever since.(7)

o Bilderberg member Donald Rumsfeld is also another PNAC member and was the main architect of the Iraqi War. As he is a regular Bilderberg attendee, there is a possibility that he may attend this year's meeting in Istanbul.(8)

My main concerns and therefore my questions to you are:

- (a) Why are war-mongers the likes of Paul Wolfowitz, Henry Kissinger and Donald Rumsfeld being allowed to hold a secret meeting in Turkey this year, without the Turkish people's knowledge or approval?
- (b) Why are the Turkish newspapers not discussing this event which will be taking place in Istanbul?
- (c) It is obvious that a secret meeting of elite minds and warmongers like these is likely to result in the manufacture of another war for profit. I would therefore like to know whether they will be holding this meeting to plan the next stages of an upcoming war with Iran? Will they be using Turkey as a chess-piece in this next war? Also, as Dr. Kissinger wrote the book "Nuclear Weapons and Foreign Policy" and admits that he is not averse to using nuclear weapons in a war situation, will they be involving us in a nuclear one?

One journalist who has been invited to this year's meeting is Mr. Cengiz Çandar. However, in my opinion, he will be providing a complete whitewash on this year's event. Being a former lecturer at the Istanbul Bilgi (American) University (9), and a good friend of Paul Wolfowitz during the 2003 Invasion of Iraq, it is obvious in my opinion that Mr. Çandar has been invited to attend the conferences due to his loyalty to Bilderberg, and will most definitely be writing pro-Bilderberg articles. (10) Therefore, it is my belief not to trust him to make an accurate appraisal of this year's meeting and I ask that independent Turkish journalists attend this year, so that the Turkish people know exactly what is taking place in their own country.

I am completely appalled by the total lack of discussion in Turkish newspapers about the upcoming Bilderberg meeting, by the huge level of secrecy and denial surrounding it, the total lack of transparency of these meetings, and by the high level of ignorance Turkish people are showing about the Bilderberg Group. A secret meeting is being held by the world's most influential warmongers, right under our noses! This is an outrage.

As a Turkish citizen, I am deeply offended that my own government would allow this secret meeting to take place on Turkish soil without our knowledge or approval. I therefore ask you that there be complete journalistic transparency at the upcoming Bilderberg meeting in Istanbul this year. If the Bilderberg Group have nothing to hide, then we must be allowed a full transcript of their meeting. Therefore, the Independent Turkish Press must attend the meeting this year. If this is not possible, I ask that you, as a servant of the Turkish people, not allow the upcoming Bilderberg meeting to take place in Turkey.

As a public servant, I expect your reply within 10 working days of receiving this Open Letter.

Yours sincerely,

[anonymous]

A very concerned Turkish Citizen

Bilderberger (BP CEO) quits as affair exposed

Browne is also expected to leave the board of U.S. investment bank Goldman Sachs Group, where he has been a director since 1999, a source familiar with the matter said on Tuesday.

Tue May 1, 2007 10:32pm ET - By Tom Bergin

http://today.reuters.com/news/articlenews.aspx?storyID=2007-05-02T023249Z\_01\_WLA8119\_RTRUKOC\_0\_US-BP-CEC

LONDON (Reuters) - Oil major BP Plc said Chief Executive John Browne had resigned with immediate effect after a UK court lifted an injunction preventing a newspaper group from publishing details about his private life.

"In my 41 years with BP I have kept my private life separate from my business life," Browne said in a statement on Tuesday.

"I have always regarded my sexuality as a personal matter, to be kept private. It is a matter of deep disappointment that a newspaper group has now decided that allegations about my personal life should be made public," he added.

Browne said he had had a four-year relationship with Canadian citizen Jeff Chevalier who had told his story to Associated Newspapers, publishers of the Daily Mail, Mail on Sunday and Evening Standard.

Browne, who had been due to step down in July, said he had decided to leave now to "avoid unnecessary embarrassment and distraction to the company".

One analyst, who declined to be named, said: "It is an ignominious end to a glorious career".

Browne did acknowledge in a personal statement that he had lied in his initial witness statement about how he met Chevalier. While he had quickly retracted this "untruth", a BP source said it was this that made Browne feel compelled to resign.

Justice David Eady told the High Court he had taken into consideration Browne's admission he had lied for his decision after a legal battle that had lasted four months in private.

"I am not prepared to make allowances for a 'white lie' told to the court in circumstances such as these," Eady said.

Browne will be succeeded by his designated successor Tony Hayward, the company said.

Browne said allegations in court documents disclosed on Tuesday were "full of misleading and erroneous claims.

"In particular, I deny categorically any allegations of improper conduct relating to BP," Browne added.

BP Chairman Peter Sutherland said Browne had told the company of allegations over the limited use by Chevalier of BP computer and staff resources.

"At John's explicit request, the board instigated a review of the evidence. That review concluded that the allegations of misuse of company assets and resources were unfounded or insubstantive," Sutherland added in the statement.

Browne will also be hit financially as a result of his early resignation.

As well as losing his agreed entitlement to a year's notice including a bonus of up to 1.3 times his annual salary, worth more than 3.5 million pounds ($7 million), he also foregoes inclusion in a long-term performance share plan with a maximum potential value of some 12 million pounds.

Browne is also expected to leave the board of U.S. investment bank Goldman Sachs Group, where he has been a director since 1999, a source familiar with the matter said on Tuesday.

Goldman Sachs declined to comment. Shares in BP closed 0.4 percent lower at 563 pence.

- THE POWER ELITE'S USE OF WAR AND DEBT

The year after Mossadegh was ousted, the Dutch hosted the first Bilderberg meeting where, according to William Jasper in GLOBAL TYRANNY...STEP BY STEP, "the international ruling elite meet to scheme and palaver."

By Dennis L. Cuddy, Ph.D. - April 30, 2007 - NewsWithViews.com

<http://www.newswithviews.com/Cuddy/dennis100.htm>

Several hundred years ago, the Bank of England was established by money from the Bank of Amsterdam and the Dutch power elite, who also brought William and Mary to power in England in 1689. Within 9 years, King William got the British Treasury in great debt to the Bank of England, following the power elite's principle of "get them in debt" to control them. This principle was used throughout the 18th and 19th centuries via costly wars to control entire nations which had imperialist ambitions.

Tremendous fortunes were built during this time by the power elite, primarily reflected in emerging oil cartels such as Standard Oil (Rockefellers) with Anglo-Iranian (worked with Rhodes/Milner Group) and Shell (Royal Dutch, William and Mary came to England from Holland). By the early 20th century, John D. Rockefeller had his agents in every hamlet of the U.S., and foundations (e.g., Rockefeller) were used to further the power elite's designs. Congressional Research director Norman Dodd said that minutes from a Carnegie Endowment meeting revealed the attitude that war would be a primary vehicle for accomplishing their goals.

Both Presidents Woodrow Wilson and FDR have spoken and written about these powerful people who literally own our government. This power elite has had its operatives in key positions, and a young Druid, Winston Churchill, conducted a study of what the U.S. reaction would be if a passenger liner with Americans on board were to be sunk by a German submarine. Some years later, British Secretary of State Sir Edward Grey (close to the Rhodes/Milner Group) deliberately misled German Ambassador Lichnowsky to begin World War I. And Lord Esher (member of Cecil Rhodes' Circle of Initiates) plotted "to shed American blood as soon as possible" to get the U.S. into the war.

Why a war with Germany? This was done to weaken Germany militarily and economically as a threat to the power elite's plans, including access to Middle East oil. After the war, Sir Percy Cox (Rhodes/Milner Group) carved up the Middle East into various nations, establishing Kuwait as a block to Iraq's access to the sea, thus controlling oil routes. The First World War was also fought to get nations in debt and to bring about the power elite's League of Nations as a world government.

When the League wasn't successful, a second world war was needed, so the power elite built up Germany again as well as imperialist Japan, even selling the latter scrap metal with which to build warships. Nazi officers were on many Standard Oil tankers to be sure they weren't sunk. And the German General Staff developed a secret plan to bring about the power elite's control beginning in the 1990s (see Chapter 9 of Sumner Welles' THE TIME FOR DECISION, 1944). Prime Minister Churchill (who had a "secret circle") and FDR knew about the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in advance (see Skull & Bones member Henry Stimson's diary about FDR maneuvering Japan into firing the first shot). The Second World War also allowed the permanent stationing of U.S. forces in Germany and Japan.

After World War II, the power elite finally fulfilled the promise of the Balfour Declaration to the Jews, and the nation of Israel was established in 1948. This was not due to any particular affinity for the Jewish people, but rather to have a militarily strong but economically dependent (and therefore subject to coercion) country in the midst of Arab oil nations. An example of Israel being able to check Arab military efforts can be seen with the Israeli victory in their 1967 war. But the power elite's "management" of Israel can also be seen in the recent Israeli failure to crush Hezbollah, probably due to economic coercion (e.g., threats of no further loans or foreign investments).

The year after the founding of Israel, the power elite in 1949 facilitated the success of the Chinese Communists over Chinese Nationalists, who relocated largely to Taiwan, thus allowing the permanent presence of U.S. forces there. The permanent stationing of U.S. troops in South Korea near the north of China and the south of the USSR was facilitated by the deliberately "no win" Korean War in the early 1950s.

I have quoted many times Lincoln Bloomfield's 1962 study for the State Department, in which he indicated that if the Communist dynamic were greatly abated, the West might lose whatever incentive it has for world government. Thus, it was important to the power elite that the USSR and China be perceived as real threats so as to further the dialectical process that would synthesize Eastern Communism and Western Capitalism into a final World Socialist Government. Ford Foundation president H. Rowan Gaither in 1953 even told Norman Dodd (mentioned earlier) that they and others were under directives from the White House to so alter life in the U.S. as to make possible a comfortable merger with the Soviet Union.

Also in 1953, the independent elected Iranian leader, Mossadegh, was removed from office by the power elite (via the CIA and Allen Dulles) because he nationalized Iranian oil, which greatly displeased the oil cartel mentioned earlier. The year after Mossadegh was ousted, the Dutch (remember Royal Dutch Shell mentioned earlier) hosted the first Bilderberg meeting where, according to William Jasper in GLOBAL TYRANNY...STEP BY STEP, "the international ruling elite meet to scheme and palaver."

War was used by the power elite again in the 1960s and 1970s with the Vietnam War serving more than one function. First, it served to distract from radical domestic changes the power elite wanted, as described in James Kunen's THE STRAWBERRY STATEMENT. In this book, he revealed ESSO (Rockefeller) money was used to try to "buy up a few radicals" to seem so extremely liberal, the populace would not notice the power elite's own move to the left (e.g., "ping pong diplomacy" opening up China to the West). Also, Vietnam was another deliberately "no win" war that "turned off" youth from patriotic nationalism as part of the power elite's created "generation gap." That this can be recognized as part of the power elite's plan is evident from Philip Freneau's July 1792 AMERICAN MUSEUM article, where he warns the young American Republic that getting people in debt and using military defeat (e.g., Vietnam War) were part of the elite's strategy to gain control of the U.S.

It was also toward the end of the Vietnam War that the power elite's agent, Henry Kissinger, revealed how they think about us common folk when he stated that soldiers are simply "dumb animals" to be used in the furtherance of an administration's foreign policy decisions. That the Vietnam War wasn't a "real war" seems clear from the fact that the U.S. continued financially to assist the USSR and China throughout the war, even though they were the 2 nations primarily responsible for North Vietnam's and the Viet Cong's ability to wage war against the U.S.

In the 1980s, the power elite turned its attention to the Persian Gulf causing a prolonged war between Iraq and Iran (both sides were assisted by the U.S.). Iraq won this war but accrued great debt as a result, and when the power elite denied Saddam Hussein loans to pay off the debt, he invaded Kuwait which he thought had given (not loaned) him the funds to conduct the war against Iran. In a repeat of Lord Grey's misleading Germany to begin World War I, American Ambassador to Iraq April Glaspie seems to have misled Saddam into thinking he would not be opposed if he invaded Kuwait. This was all done to "set up" Saddam, whom the power elite did not want to obtain undue influence over oil production in the Gulf region.

It was one thing to reduce Saddam's military strength in the first Gulf War, but it was quite another thing to persuade people to support an occupation of that nation. That would take a pretext or incident like 9/11, which Bush administration officials immediately tried to blame on Saddam. Remember that longtime Middle East CIA agent Robert Baer in SEE NO EVIL indicated that a high-ranking CIA officer said 9/11 would eventually be considered a "triumph" of the intelligence community, not a failure.

The prolonged chaos (now over 4 years) in Iraq has allowed U.S. troops to obtain a permanent military presence there in the region, which is what the power elite wanted all along. The removal of the Taliban from power in Afghanistan after the attacks of 9/11 also facilitated the permanent presence of U.S. military forces in the Caspian region, likewise part of the power elite's plan. According to famous author H. G. Wells in THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME (1933), there will be eventually a conference in Basra, Iraq, which will bring to fruition the power elite's ultimate goal of a World

This goal has been pursued for many years using primarily wars and debt. For recent examples concerning debt accrued by means other than war, see John Perkins' AN ECONOMIC HIT MAN and Steve Hiatt's A GAME AS OLD AS EMPIRE. Examples include the Philippines being told to borrow great sums of money to improve its infrastructure so that factories will locate there, but then cheaper labor is found in other countries, so Filipinos are left holding the bag. Also, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and World Bank funnel loans to nations where dictators pocket the money in their offshore accounts, and the people of that country are left to pay the debt and restructure their economies along the lines required by the IMF and World Bank.

A "Punctured Administration" in Washington

3 April 2007, Cengiz Candar

We are having a chat with the World Bank President Paul Wolfowitz in a room overlooking the Potomac river in Watergate, Washington. When he selected Watergate for our brunch meeting, I can't resist asking: you Republicans have a hang up on Watergate, you are always drawn here against your will.

He laughs and points at the Potomac River. He means that his choice was based on the beauty of the view, not past history. Four years ago today he was the Defence Secretary's assistant and had made his reputation as the architect of the war in Iraq. In 2003 and 2004, the subject of our meetings was the political dimension of Turco-American relations and the fallout from the Turkish parliament's refusal to allow US troops use Turkish soil in war. This time his title is "President of the World Bank" and our discussion is focussed on the relations between Turkey and the World Bank.

Not long ago that relationship took a comical turn because his big toes emerged through holes in his socks in a visit to the Selimiye Mosque. The "holes in his socks" made for so much publicity in the US and the rest of the world that it is now almost impossible to say Paul Wolfowitz and Turkey in one breath without remembering that incident.

Two days before, the moment he saw me in a meeting room at the World Bank with a delegation consisting of the Ankara Forum, i.e. the delegation from the Turkish Union of Chambers and Commodity Exchanges (the TOBB) headed by Rifat Hisarcikoglu, and the joint delegation of Palestinian and Israeli businessmen, the first thing he did was to laugh and ask: "did you get me a pair of socks?"

The World Bank observes an American law that forbids its employees to accept gifts worth more than $100. Even so, after his toes made the headlines, he has been receiving boxes of socks from Turkey, China, Germany, Italy and many other countries. For legal reasons, he cannot collect most of these gifts. Knowing that, I replied "no, I didn't bring any but I can help you by relieving you from the gifts."

Joking aside, I know the secret of the holes in those socks. He had been wearing "Golden Toe" brand American socks. I said "they're awful. I once had quite a few and you wouldn't believe how little they last." He nodded. His visit to Turkey had provided enough evidence of their longevity.

He said he was very impressed by the vitality of Turkey's small businesses. He said he would soon make two new visits to Turkey. The first will be connected with the Bilderberg meeting scheduled to take place in Istanbul between 31 May and

3 June. It is not certain that he will participate in that event. He says that "the Bilderberg is "a valuable opportunity to meet many people and make acquaintances." He has been in the administration of the Bilderberg and attended these meetings many times already. I said "for years, conspiracy theorists claimed that the Bilderberg was covert world government. This year I will be there myself. I shall see what covert world government is all about." He added mockingly: "that is still being claimed, there are many web sites making similar claims."

Although it is uncertain whether he will attend the Bilderberg, he pointed out that he had already made a promise to Tayyip Erdogan to attend another meeting in June, the International Investors Board which will be headed by Turkey's prime minister.

Will Erdogan still be prime minister then, or will he be Turkey's president? That too is uncertain. If the latter is the case, will he join the board over which he will be presiding? Uncertain.

The topic of the discussion changed to Turkey's presidential and general elections. Did he say anything? He said nothing. He only asked questions. So I provided him with a summary of everything that everybody in Turkey talked about, knew and didn't know. He asked if the Ankara Forum was satisfied with the meeting with the World Bank. I said they were realists. They made a good start but they do not believe that their business with the World Bank is concluded at this stage. He agreed with the TOBB directors.

It is not necessary to wait long before we come across discrepancies between the content of information coming from Washington and the behind-the-scenes reality, particularly in foreign policy issues. For example, when I wrote that the US-backed conference scheduled to take place this month in Istanbul was no longer a certainty, and that prime minister Nouri al-Maliki was opposed to it even though he had long stayed close to Turkey due to his reservations about the Kurds, both official circles and colleagues protested.

However, on Sunday, the Washington Post carried an article by Jim Hoagland, "Why is Nouri al-Maliki blocking an international conference?" It explains the circumstances that I wanted to bring to your attention last month. Just read this part: Washington has focused intense pressure on Maliki, who may yet agree to send Zebari to Istanbul rather than see the conference aborted. The reasons for his resistance were explained in these terms by an Iraqi official who requested anonymity in order to speak frankly: "Why should we go to a meeting to be ganged up on by European and Arab countries that were against the liberation of Iraq to begin with? Why should it be held on the soil of a country that threatens and slights Iraqis instead of helping them?"

Evidently, Washington's support isn't enough to fix the problem and move on. That is because Washington itself displays a "weakness of authority". That authority has holes in it. Its failure in Iraq and its position in the Congress make its weakness manifest.

And for now, it is still uncertain how long this weakness of authority in the world's only superpower will last or what it will lead to or how it will be fixed.

The Hoagland article about the international conference is here:

You Receive What They Believe You Deserve

<http://www.americanchronicle.com/articles/viewArticle.asp?articleID=19256>

Nancy Levant

January 17, 2007

The global government movement was designed by the wealthiest men in our world. It was designed to support their corporations, their foundations, their opinions, and the continuance of their family dynasties. It was designed to merge their corporate powers with and into governmental powers. It was designed to hand themselves total control of the world's wealth, which means land.

They achieved their missions, first and foremost, by capturing financial control of research and development, and they did so by funding research and development via their corporate foundations.

They also created the United Nations. They created private clubs that could operate in secret, like the Council on Foreign Relations, the Bilderberg Group, the Trilateral Commission, etc., and they also created training grounds for future comrades via the secret societies inside of their Ivy League universities.

The lives and perks of such people are beyond what commoners can imagine. The power and the money at their disposal are, frankly, beyond our comprehension. It is, in fact, mostly impossible for commoners to believe. Hence, the current state of their global affairs exists. Our “freedom” is no more than a figment of our imaginations and truly an untruth. We have no freedom. It is, in fact, nonexistent.

Politicians are no longer politicians. They work for the world’s elite and represent no common man or country. They are highly paid brainwashers, visioning facilitators, deceivers, liars, and thieves. We are forced to pay their salaries. We are forced to fund all global governance initiatives, which literally stole the wealth, property, savings, and security of every commoner on the planet. The wealth that was amassed in the last 3 decades by these criminals truly is beyond comprehension – literally beyond the comprehension of common people. We live in unfathomable states of ignorance. We have been robbed blind, yet we still can’t acknowledge the theft of our money, livelihoods, children, potential, nation, and future.

The truth be told, we are no longer American people. We are Communists living amidst a bureaucratically evolving dictatorship that has been steadfastly planning for our awakening. As we recently discovered, the rest of our American military will be leaving the homeland very soon – the young men and women who are told they are protecting their homeland. They have closed many of our homeland military bases, while building global bases on foreign soil, and at the same time they have raised new paramilitary forces on American soil. In fact, there are so many new paramilitary forces on the homeland that, again, one cannot fathom their power, their intentions, or their loyalty to another system of governance.

Equally, the American commoner does not realize that he is now under the governing auspices of regional governors – governors that were appointed to power (not elected to power) – and that we, the people, don’t even know who they are, what they are doing, where they are located, or to whom they serve. These new governing bodies in the United States were illegally raised, and they were raised without the knowledge of the American people. The problem is the American people are clueless as to what is/was legal in the United States. The regional system of governance was crafted and raised by our elected representatives. We paid their salaries as they constructed a dictatorship on American soil according to the plans and dictates of their master handlers. They committed treason. Their intentions were to overthrow Constitutional America and every right granted to each and every one of us. Their missions were accomplished. America is no longer America, and we are no longer people with rights and freedom. I suggest to you that you have no freedom whatsoever.

We could look to the powers of our state capitols, but unfortunately for us, our state governors are also no longer working for the United States or the people of the individual states. They are working for the Federal government, which is not an American entity nor working under Constitutional Law. The Federal government is a global governing body operating under Communitarian Law, which is the same system of law used by the European Union. America is a global region that is merging with Mexico and Canada into the North American Union. These global regions serve under the auspices of the emerging global economy, or one system of economics, which was invented and implemented by the marriage of international banks to transnational corporations. We, the world’s people, are the laborers to this new economic system – nothing more – nothing less.

America is lowering its standard of living, while the Third World is raising its living standards. Once “equity” is achieved, we will all live meager lives in service to corporations IF AND ONLY IF we comply with this new world dictatorship. This, my stupid American friends, is Communism.

Now, let’s look at some trends in our new world. All public schools and daycare centers in America are literally crawling with “mental health/social/emotional/literacy” professionals – literally crawling with them. This cannot be denied. They are also pigeon-holing every American child into labor-destined categories, while “assessing” the “social” condition of students and their families. This also cannot be denied.

Food delivery is changing all across the U.S. Meat is becoming unaffordable by design at the United Nations, who has determined that people need to eat predominantly vegetarian diets. We have been made squeamish about beef and poultry via Mad Cow and Bird Flu media frenzies. Equally, we note all the new brand meats in all our groceries stores – brands we’ve never seen, which come from outside of the United States. All of us older Americans also note that meat is very different than it use to be in taste, color, and texture.

Weekly or monthly food deliveries are being advertised as fabulous and successful weight loss alternatives, but in actuality, we are witnessing a desensitizing tactic that benignly introduces the concept of food rationing. We see this same desensitizing tactic with implantable ID chips, which we are told helps to curb kidnappings. The truth is that sub-dermal chips are now being considered for all newborns (much like mandatory Social Security numbers). Food control and rationing is coming in the form of “here are your rations – and that’s it.” We have already witnessed the closing of smaller food markets all across America. Eventually, I suggest that “stores,” and the freedom we have to use them, will cease to exist minus some transnational superstores, where we have witnessed a decline in our quality food supply.

Our health and health care is deteriorating. Most American people cannot afford quality health care. Quality care has become the venue for the very rich, and millions of American people have been bankrupted by our health care system. As such, our global representatives now prepare our regional health care system, which will, again, lower the availability of quality medical treatment for all – and particularly for the elderly, the infirmed, and the undesirable elements of our new society.

“Co-housing,” and the creation of American “villages” headed up by “facilitator” appointed governors, is the new housing mandate of our representatives and their United Nations’ masters (The U.N. calls them “human settlements.) If you want a shocking awakening, type the word “Co-housing” into your search engines and go onto some of the co-housing community websites. Read their “missions” and thoroughly investigate all their menu items. See Communist sectors all dolled up American media-style. See what it’s like to live as a community laborer according to dictatorship, spies, and total control and propaganda.

To end, all pending legislation – all of it – is 1) unknown to the American public, and 2) destroying every single freedom that you thought was secured by the Constitution of the United States. The people running this country are not American by any stretch of the imagination. They are Communist sympathizers, employees, and facilitators. We’ve been had. We’ve been lazy. Now, we will get what they think we deserve. We’re on our own.
