In a shocking example of state-sponsored incest, booklets from a branch of the German government's Ministry for Family Affairs encourage parents to sexually massage their children as young as 1 to 3 years of age.

The booklet complains that fathers do not devote enough attention to their daughters private parts and that "this is the only way the girls can develop a sense of pride in their sex."

"Fathers do not devote enough attention to the clitoris and vagina of their daughters," write the authors of the booklet. "Their caresses too seldom pertain to these regions, while this is the only way the girls can develop a sense of pride in their sex," reads the booklet regarding 1-3 year olds."

"It has happened before in Germany. It has happened in other nations. Different causes but the same dynamic, the rejection of the moral order of the created universe results in radical evil. The German state intervention in family life is a new level of auto-destruction," said O'Brien.

The writers continue, "The child touches all parts of their father's body, sometimes arousing him. The father should do the same."

Canadian author and public speaker Michael O'Brien accuses the German government of "State-encouraged incest, which in most civilized societies is a crime." The development is, he suggests, a natural outcome of the continuing rejection of the Judeo-Christian moral order.

"The imposed social revolution that has swept the western world is moving to a new stage as it works out the logical consequences of its view of man's value," said Michael O'Brien.

"It is merely obeying its strictly materialist philosophy of man. If man is no more than a creature created for pleasure or power. If he is no more than a cell in the social organism, then no moral standards, no psychological truths, no spiritual truths can refute the 'will to power' and the 'will to pleasure,'" he added.

The sex booklets encourage parents to permit their toddlers "unlimited masturbation" except where physical injury becomes apparent.

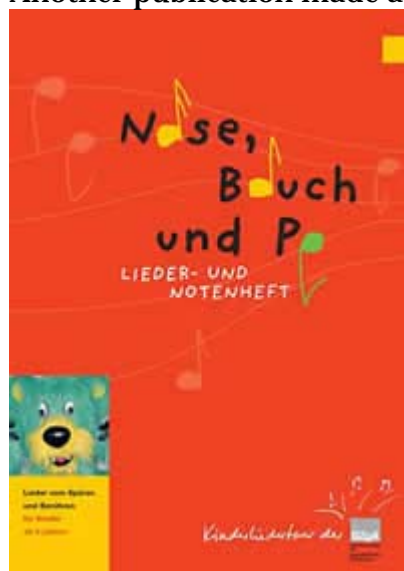

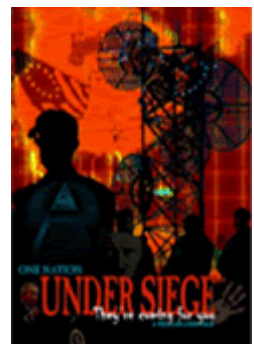

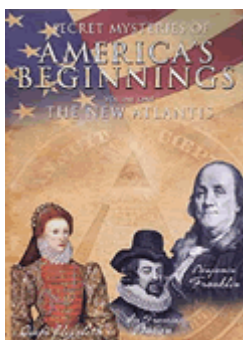

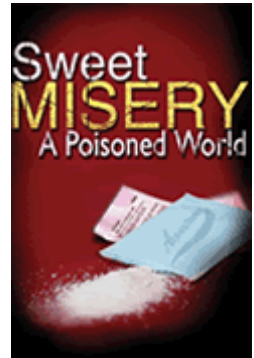

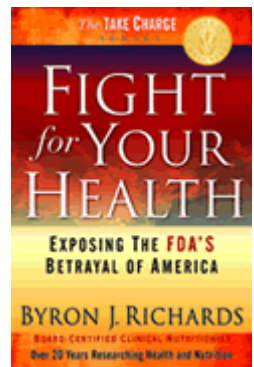

It states: "Children should learn that there is no such thing as shameful parts of the body. The body is a home, which you should be proud of." For ages 4-6, the booklet goes as far as recommending that parents teach their children the movements of copulation.

Another publication made available in Germany is a song book aimed at children of four and slightly older which includes several songs encouraging child masturbation.

The songbook entitled "Nose, belly and bum" includes one song with the following lyrics: "When I touch my body, I discover what I have. I have a vagina, because I am a girl. Vagina is not only for peeing. When I touch it, I feel a pleasant tingle."

"The wiser and deeper position of most civilizations recognized that children need a period of innocence," commented O'Brien.

"Now the state, the German state, is encouraging destruction of this state of innocence," he added. "This is consistent with the materialist philosophy that sees all moral norms and all truths about human nature as repressive. Pleasure and their distorted concept of freedom are their only guiding principles."

According to the Polish daily newspaper Rzeczpospolita, thus far the booklet is an obligatory read in nine German regions. It is used for training nursery, kindergarten and elementary school teachers. Ironically it is recommended by many organizations officially combating pedophilia, such as the German Kunderschutzbund BZgA sends out millions of copies of the booklet every year.

"A society such as Germany's which is already in steep decline, indeed into degeneration, will only inherit the whirlwind of violence and further levels of degradation of their own people," warned O'Brien.

"It has happened before in Germany. It has happened in other nations. Different causes but the same dynamic, the rejection of the moral order of the created universe results in radical evil. The German state intervention in family life is a new level of auto-destruction," said O'Brien.

Child molestation and pedophilia, as now encouraged by the German government, occur far more commonly among homosexuals than among heterosexuals on a per capita basis, according to a new study.

In her thesis -- also written for the Regent University Law Review -- Doctor Judith Reisman cited psychologist Eugene Abel, whose research found that homosexuals "sexually molest young boys with an incidence that is occurring from five times greater than the molestation of girls. ..."

Abel also found that non--incarcerated "child molesters admitted from 23.4 to 281.7 acts per offender ... whose targets were males."

"The rate of homosexual versus heterosexual child sexual abuse is staggering," Reisman wrote. She said "Abel's data of 150.2 boys abused per male homosexual offender finds no equal (yet) in heterosexual violations of 19.8 girls." Dr. Reisman is the president of the Institute for Media Education in the US.

While the German publications do not encourage homosexual activity between fathers and sons or mothers and daughters, it does not exclude these practices either.

Here in the US, The Journal of Homosexuality published a special double-issue not long ago, entitled, "Male Intergenerational Intimacy," containing many articles portraying sex between men and minor boys as loving relationships.

One article, according to Bible Probe, said parents should look upon the pedophile who loves their son "not as a rival or competitor, not as a theft of their property, but as a partner in the boy's upbringing, someone to be welcomed into their home."

Meanwhile, the homosexual magazine "Guide" said, "We can be proud that the gay movement has been home to the few voices who have had the courage to say out loud that children are naturally sexual" and "deserve the right to sexual expression with whomever they choose. ..."

The article went on to say: "Instead of fearing being labeled pedophiles, we must proudly proclaim that sex is good, including children's sexuality ... we must do it for the children's sake." "How long can psychologists and our elected leaders be in denial about the significance of the dark side, and ignore what it implies about the homosexual condition?"

"Americans would be foolish not to believe such material and practices would not be forced upon this country by power-hungry politicians," said political strategist Michael Baker.

For instance, a large number of Oregon residents recently condemned state legislators for passing a bill giving special rights to homosexuals (SB2), which forces churches and religious institutions and organizations to hire homosexuals, bisexuals and transgender persons.

A majority of the state's voters passed Measure 36 in 2004 with its clause that "it is the policy of Oregon, and its political subdivisions, that only a marriage between one man and one woman shall be valid or legally recognized as marriage."

"If this legislature thought the citizens had changed their minds, they should have referred SB 2 and HB2007 to the voters for their approval. It is obvious that they are trying to ram something unwanted down the throats of the people of Oregon," according to Jack Alan Brown, chairman of the Constitution Party of Oregon.

Brown urged the people of Oregon to vigorously support any attempts to refer these bills to the voters for their approval or rejection. Furthermore, he requested a push for the recall of those legislators who have betrayed the public trust by defying their instructions through the constitutional amendment adopted by the people and violating their oaths of office to support the Constitution of Oregon.

"For too long, Oregon has been complacent in the face of despicable actions proposed and instigated by corrupt politicians. It is time for these legislators to feel our wrath as we turn them out of office and call for criminal proceedings against them for perjury," wrote Jack Alan Brown.

Jack Brown said, "I would remind the voters that the CONSTITUTION PARTY has a strong declaration of support for the traditional, divinely instituted family as a basic element of society. None of our candidates would fail [voters] as Democrat and Republican legislators have."

Liberals in the United States have advocated masturbation training for young children including President Bill Clinton's Surgeon General, Dr. Jocelyn Elders, who eventually was forced out of her position because of her radical views regarding young children and sex.

A staunch supporter of abortion, Elders once told reporters that American Christians should stop their love affair with the fetus.

"Someone such as Dr. Elders or Senator Hillary Clinton would be right at home in 'Progressive' countries such as Germany and Holland," claims political strategist Michael Baker.

Baker also mentioned that much of what he's seeing and hearing reminds him of an incident in New York City involving school administrators giving the nod to a production of the controversial Off-Broadway play "The Virginia Monologues" being show at high schools throughout the five boroughs.

"It's madness," said Baker. "On the one hand you have male students being punished for improper behavior with girls, while on the other hand you're showing these impressionable boys a play about female sexuality." It's madness.
