No jobs for US citizens without Homeland Security approval

Submitted by Canada IFP on Sat, 2007-05-26 18:00. Americas | United States | News

US citizens who apply for a job will need prior approval from Department of Homeland Security under the terms immigration bill passed by the Senate this week.

American Civil Liberties Union pointed out that the DHS's Employment Eligibility Verification System (EEVS) is error plagued and if the department makes a mistake in determining work eligibility, there will be virtually no way to challenge the error or recover lost wages due to the bill's prohibitions on judicial review.

Even current employees will need to obtain eligibility approval from the DHS Within 60 days of the Immigration Reform Act of 2006 becoming law.

"EEVS would be a financial and bureaucratic nightmare for both businesses and workers," said Timothy Sparapani, ACLU Legislative Counsel. "Under this already flawed program no one would be able to work in the U.S. without DHS approval - creating a 'No Work List' similar to the government's 'No Fly List.' We need immigration reform, but not at this cost."

The act allocates US$400 million for the implementation of the EEVS, but the Congressional Budgeting Office estimates the system to cost in excess of a billion dollars.

But you need your government's approval to:

1. Get on a plane
2. Leave the country
3. Re-enter the country
4. Get a job

What a sad, sad state of affairs. Well, hopefully the USAns will awaken soon, get the hell out of my country (Canada) and go home and make something more than noise and cheers for 'stars'. Yech, what a waste of a beautiful chunk of the continent.

As we look back on September 11th, we realize now, of course, even with the perspective of several years, that the attacks on that morning were not merely attacks on our fellow citizens – with a tremendous, painful loss of life; they were not merely attacks on our economy – and they were clearly aimed and destined at destroying our economic life; but above and beyond those, they were also attacks on our freedom and our liberties.

Now, six years after those attacks, there are some who are beginning to downplay the threat to our homeland that comes each day from these radical ideologues, who say we ought to reconfigure our view of this and really treat it as another species of the kinds of challenges from terrorists that we experienced in the '70s and '80s and '90s, from the Baader-Meinhof gang or the Red Brigade or even the Irish Republican Army. Some people say that even the rhetoric, using the term "war" somehow overstates and inflates the challenge that we face.

I disagree with that. I begin with Osama bin Laden's fatwa of February 23, 1998, which was literally a declaration of war against America and Americans, beginning with a false accusation that America had declared war on all Islam, and ending with a command – and I'm quoting here – to "kill the Americans and their allies, civilian and military, in any country where it is possible to do it."

And from that basic premise, that the war that was launched by Al-Qaeda is a war on our freedoms and liberties, and not just on our persons and our way of life, comes two very important conclusions. First, if we do care about our civil rights and our civil liberties, and if we are determined to pass them on to our children and to our children's children, then we have to make sure that we are securing our homeland against those who would rob us of our freedoms.

What they seek to do is to set down roots, to create states, or at least mini-states, which will be safe havens from which they can construct platforms to launch further attacks in the service of their ultimate vision of a totalitarian caliphate.

Those who somehow question whether we are truly at war have forgotten that bin Laden and his allies have spent the past decade doing exactly what they promised that they would do: plotting strikes designed not only to kill as many people as possible, but to topple our global system of security and safety and prosperity. And those who forget that we are at war, forget as well that were it not for the actions that America and her allies have taken – destroying Al-Qaeda's safe haven in Afghanistan; supporting fledgling democracies around the world, including in Iraq; deploying intelligence assets around the globe; capturing or killing terrorist leaders in every continent; and remaining vigilant at home – were it not for these efforts, there could well be and could well have been more 9/11 attacks in this country.

You bomb, murder and rape hundreds of thousands, for oil and control of resources, this is called GENOCIDE and will create absolute hatred and revenge. In their cases revenge suicide attacks is resistance and insurgency is resistance to your occupinig force. And dont give us this Al Qaeda crap. It was the US CIA that funded and trained them in the FIRST PLACE for their own bloody deeds when it suited them. Hey your country funded the Taliban when it suited them too, so you cant say cant say the US hasn't funded terrorist groups. So how in hell do you expect countries to sit back and get pillaged by America and fell good about it. Shame on you for not seeing what a victim could possibly feel like. This is your FOREIGN POLICY and is you countries legacy. Deal with it. You started it, not Alqaeda. And follow the money trail FROM 911, THE BASTARDS that are reaping the billions from that are your leaders. Deal with that too, its not as if 911 bullshit hasn't happened in your country before, ie <http://www.usliberty.org/>

I opened the 616 page PDF file of the Act listed above, but it will take some time to find the specific part of the bill that says we'll need DHS approval to have a job. Can anyone find the specific wording that says that? I would love to post it on my site. Stock up on canned food and ammo- the revolution is near. I hope.

The EEVS System is addressed beginning on page 196 or so of the
PDF. NO WHERE in the wording does it state that ALL employers of ALL employees will be required to obtain pre-approval from the System. Of course, any Govt agency can do whatever the hell they want at any time the want.

No one is more cynical or un-trusting of our Govt than I am (check out my site), but to say that the Immigration bill as written would require every employee, current or prospective, to be approved by DHS is simply not true. If someone reads the bill and finds I am wrong, I will gladly stand corrected. And if it is true, so what? So far, Americans have failed to get off their fat butts and do anything about all the crap that has gone down already (stolen elections, 9-11, the war in Iraq, the PATRIOT Act, etc). That's the reason our Govt does what it pleases now. Nobody cares. Unfortunately, I don't think there will be a revolution. Everyone will drink the kool aid and do as they are told. If that happens, we deserve it.

Enough is enough. When is the damn low life, oxygen wasting public going to get their respective heads out of their ass and get rid of these Nazi's that are running our country. Now they propose that a dual citizenship Zionist jew have the right to say if American Citizen and vets like myself can change jobs. We talked and they didn't listen, we voted and it didn't make a damn bit of difference, that leaves only one thing and I'm not talking about dancing. They want to turn this into a police state and I'll be the first to publically say it, "Over my dead body". Turn that damn television set off and start learning some means of self defense because you're going to need it. These bastards could care less about you as they are simply power hunger. What makes it so damn easy is that this country is populated by individuals that can write eloquent rebuttals but can't fight their way out of a wet paperbag. The assholes are afraid of loosing what they have and don't realize that if they don't get off their ass and confront these bastards they will loose it anyway. We are in the last portion of a real life game, the loss of which means the loss of the remaining few freedoms we have, the loss of what material items we have worked so hard for and for a great number of Americans it will mean the end of your sorry useless lives. This is no joke and is not bull shit, it is for real. The second ammendment was passed to prevent this very thing. If this government is not forced to see the outrage and see it very soon you will see the military on the streets and in your homes as they disarm you. Then what are you going to fight back with your TV Guide? When they come to put you on a train to visit one of the camps that Halburton is being paid $383,000,000 to renovate you can bet your ass you will NEVER come home again. Is that what you want? Look up Operation Northwoods and you can read your future, it's all laid out. Read the end of The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich and you will see what's in store for you. Wake up America, you haven't much time left.

Whatever is happening to our country and our lives is only due to what we have ALLOWED and caused to happen.

The simple lives we used to lead have been replaced by confused, convoluted, litigation filled nonsense.

I have believed for years that the attacks would begin on our country due to ONE reason, and one reason only==OUR FOREIGN POLICY of intervention and subsequent occupation of other peoples property and natural resources.

Changing the world through war, invasion, and intimidation will not work.

We can only change the world beginning with ourselves, and through SPIRITUAL self-discovery - and I am NOT talking about Religions.

Religions, and politics have only been the CAUSE of wars and destruction of our societies, economies, and the earth. And if you disagree with me, just try to think of any SOLUTION that has benefited mankind which has eminated from either of those.

Any amount of goodness, respect, and progress has only come from the self.

If one is really interested in "taking back" our country, then you only need to start with working on yourself first- then help someone else who may need you regardless of the color of their skin, their religion, or their politics. The rest will take care of itself.

Love is the simplest, most effective, and most rewarding answer.

I hope they try to pass a law requiring that everyone - young and old, newborns and immigrants, gays and straights, blacks, whites and every other shade of skin - all have to have biometric implants. I think that will be the only thing that will stir Americans from their womb-like oblivion and roust us into action. I fear that while the neocons have effected considerable harm on our once-proud Republic, our prospects of curbing, much less rolling back the damage they have done are not too great even if the spineless, uninspired Democrats were to take both houses and the Executive tomorrow. If we want REAL CHANGE, we need to demand REALLY DIFFERENT politicians. Perhaps we should all vote for at least one third-party candidate on the national ticket in '08. Especially if we voted for Libertarians, then something might really start happening on the Hill. At least that way we would get some different opinions up in D.C. and give a counterpoint to all the crusty, comfortable dicklumps that seem to be spending OUR time and money worrying about how they're going to win the next election, raise their salaries, and subjugate the inconvenient masses. This "two-party" system is for the birds. God, how I wish we were as pissed off about what our government is doing as the Greeks get when their government crosses the line - then there would be riots in the streets. We could use their fiestiness, their chilli-pepper-hot tempers. Anything but sitting back like drugged sheep, taking it in the ass and doing what we are told. It isn't the arrogant, unconstitutional, unrestrained power-grabs by government officials that piss me off the most; that's what governments do, and we should expect it. What really gets me angry is the way nobody seems to care enough to do anything about the usurping agents of the bureaucratic behemoth of national government. Yes, I know that everybody talks about the problems, and everybody gets pissed off, or frustrated, or depressed. But we Americans have gotten so used to our mantra of "letting the process take its course", what with its checks and balances and all, that we feel like we can't DO anything, really, to influence the course of events. We feel like the problems will just solve themselves, that the system will do the work of governing for us. But systems don't produce set results independently of their input. The input of our system of government, on which the outcomes turn, is the opinion of an informed public. No input from the informed public, and the results issue forth accordingly as if the public's opinions don't count for anything. Strong input, and results issue forth that have been shaped and influenced by the opinions of the people. We CAN DO things, many things, to influence policy, if only 1) we care enough to actually think our plans through and 2) we get off our asses and put some effort into it. Voicing our opinions to representatives is a good start, and I promise, this WORKS. I worked in a congressman's office some years back, and I have seen this kind of action change a politician's policy first-hand. Second, petitions are a great legal tool, and they are simple to devise and implement. In many cases, a certain number of signatures can virtually guarantee a legal about-face, if the proper channels are utilized to bring the petition to bear on the legal matter at hand. Thirdly, WORK the LOCAL (and State) politicians. They are much less strapped for time, and much more inclined to consider different points of view from 'regular Joes' than national-level politicians. Starting at the lower levels of government is more likely to produce localized positive results which can then be emulated in other places and used to pressure political changes at the national level. With state and local legislators in one's corner, it is much easier to bend the ear of your congressmen and senators in Washington. These kinds of approaches are keys to getting results within the democratic/legal system, but they won't do any good at all if no one uses them. Personally, I have great faith in the method of governance we have established in America (at least the idealized form of it), and I believe it could accomplish what we need from it. But if it comes to pass that it is insufficient to the task at hand, I will have no reservations about supporting armed rebellion. This last option is to be reserved, not foresworn. If it comes to a choice between living like a slave in my own country, or fighting the establishment that wishes to make me a slave, I'll take my chances fighting, and we will either succeed and rebuild this great nation according to the principles of justice and freedom, or we will die trying and be no worse off as a result. Jimmy Cliff said, "I would rather be a free man in my grave, than living as a puppet or a slave," and I know that's right. Good God, America, WAKE UP.

for all your legislative inquiries, including sponsors and cosponsors of bills in both houses.

And one more thing: There is an awful lot of anti-semitism in these blog responses. Stop dissing the Jews; they are NOT the source of your (or our) problems, regardless of whatever ignorant, hateful propoganda you may believe in. Hitler hated the Jews, and he was an asshole. If you're an anti-Semite, your a racist asshole, too, and you should keep your racist asshole opinions to yourself. In this country, we're ALL just Americans.

I'm afraid Jews will disagree with you, if you care to ask any of them interests of what country are #1 for them, and if they feel themselves Americans. I won't even hint in the direction of the answer - try it out yourself some day. Maybe then you will begin to understand why there's no such term as anti-Estonian, or anti-Ethiopian, or anti-Mexican, but anti-semitic surfaces wherever Jews live for thousands of years.

HI! Im your average stupid assed american and why should I worry about that silly government taking my rights crap when there's still good shopping at the mall? I think my task in life is to get a house and spawn so I can make another generation of idiots as dumb as myself for the government to feed off of their life force without any silly need for human rights or dignity. It's all about good shopping, not life liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

yeah, we used to have something good, didn't we? then we let it slip away and now we don't even remember what we're missing. As long as we have our Soma, our 'beer and tv,' our consumer-whore mentality we can forget our problems and forget our past, and at least we can believe we're happy. Way to go, America. There's nothing unhealthy and twisted about lying to yourself. Whatever gets you by, right? ;0)

Poor americans... I wonder how many real terrorists have been caught so far by the homeland (in)security?

The answer is NONE

Welcome to the new world disorder. You paid for it. Now taste it!

It depends on how you define real terrorist. Think of it in broader meaning. From my point of view, anyone endangering my safety is terrorist. If my president is fighting war on terror, and you put up some protest sign, then you are jeopardizing his effort to protect me, thus you are aiding the enemy, thus you are one of them. If you are interfering with TSA officer who is doing his job in airport to ensure my safety on the plane, then you are trying to make the flight less safe, and your place is in jail. If you call your representative and demand to withdraw funds from the troops that are there to protect me, then you are working for our enemies, and I expect that your call is traced, and you should be having a knock on your door.
