Israel asks U.S. foreign aid be paid in EUROS

FYI - the Euro is now worth about 1.4 US Dollars.

Israeli Foreign Minister Tzipi Livni

Secretary of State Rice has acknowledged a communique from Israeli foreign minister Tzipi Levni which requests that all foreign aid payments and loans from the United States be made in Euros rather than in Dollars. Foreign Minister Levni cited the rapidly declining dollar and its disfavor as a world currency as reasons for the request.

"In the spirit of Yom Kippur, the United States will not hold Israel to any agreements obligating them to accept Dollars as payment for their foreign aid. We will translate our obligations into Euros or whatever currency that best fits Israel's needs" Secretary RICE said in the Friday, Sept 21 announcement.

"We need to place our Israeli obligations at the top of our national priority list. Israel should not suffer any inconvenience due to currency fluctuations" said Rice before heading off to Camp David.

A similar request from Egypt was declined last week.

Little ex-Mossad #$$%*@!!!!

On a brighter note, this is further ammunition to use against anyone who supports israel. The zio-vampires won't even accept U.S. currency as blood. They now require that the U.S. first purify its blood into Euros.

Once again a whizz-bag catch by the (appropriately named) Claymoremind.

A couple of quotes from the Internet....

"The dollar is a basket case," said Peter Schiff, president of Euro Pacific Capital. "We are going to pay the piper for years of having the underlying fundamentals of our economy disintegrate beneath our feet."

<http://www.iht.com/articles/2007/07/10/business/econ.php>

"Thinking it is good that the value of the dollar is low because it means we get to export more, is like thinking it's good you totaled your car, because that means you won't have to pay for gas and insurance anymore."

"That's it. I'm moving to Zimbabwe."

“Don’t panic, folks. We’re just making way for the Amero.”

”I have some old Confederate dollars. Maybe they’ll be accepted again.”

“The Federal Debt is greater than the sum of all money on the planet. What did you think would happen?”

“I live in Germany. The glorious spin on the radio was, Euro reaches all time high! Of course, this has no effect on European prices of imports (mostly from Asia). We will continue to be ripped off. Most electronics goods cost 50-100% more than they do in the US. We're told this is import duties, or higher costs of distribution in Europe. In reality, we are charged more because the companies can get away with it.”

“Yeah? Well I live in Norway. The dollar is nearing record lows against the Norwegian kroner too. Next time I travel to the US, I think I’ll take a week’s salary and buy a new car!”

“You think this is good for Europe? Products from EU countries are more and more expensive for the US. Therefore EU exports to the US will drop.”

“One reason the dollar was the king currency was that people had a higher rate of return if they invested in dollar denominated assets. The U.S. military’s strength guaranteed risk free investment in U.S. treasuries. Now with the world's emerging markets in China, India, and Eastern Europe, money is flowing out of U.S. toward the rest of the world. People are warming up to the idea of investing in countries other than the U.S. Chinese stocks are on fire.”

“I sense a Christmas shopping trip to the US coming up this year. I can understand that the US isn't happy about this, but for the rest of the world it's party time!”

The dollar hit a record low against the euro this week, but the bigger story for many currency watchers was the greenback's slip against the yen. A sharp rise in the yen could have nasty consequences for millions of investors around the world. The dollar slid to a one-month low of ¥120.96 yen on Wednesday, raising concerns that a strengthening of the Japanese currency could put billions of dollars worth of low-cost yen loans in peril.

For years, investors have been borrowing at Japan's super-low interest rates and selling yen to buy investments in higher-yielding currencies - a trading bet known on Wall Street as the "yen carry trade." A big, sustained rebound in the yen could jeopardize those trades. The yen is a funding currency. When it rallies, it makes the repayment of those yen loans more expensive, even though interest rates are low.

As the dollar dies, investors to seek safer places for their assets - and exit the yen carry trade. Even though the dollar is at an all-time low against the euro, its movement against the yen may be what bears closer watching.

I saw your post an hour ago, and I'm still laughing. You have truly outdone yourself!

The sick thing is that this is probably true in any case. How do we keep track of all the U.S. aid given to isra-hell? Wouldn't it make sense for them to demand Euros? No one in the US government would dare refuse, or even mention it. Which zio-media outlet would print it? Has the zio-media run with the story that the Canadian dollar is now worth more than the U.S. dollar? Soon the Mexican peso will also be on par with the dollar, which will complete the North American Union plan.

Your post is brilliant because it's true. Most impressive.

thx1138 | Sun, 2007-09-23 05:24

In fact, Claymore

We should start dropping seeds in other web sites.

Little comments like this...

"I heard that israel is now demanding that U.S. aid be in euros, not dollars. Does anyone know if that's true? How exactly can we find out? Does anyone have web links?"

Since zio-secrecy is impenetrable, there is no real way to confirm or deny it. And since it is a question, not an assertion, the zionists and their slaves cannot get much mileage from attacking it. All they can say is, "You're a vicious anti-Semite for even asking."

When reality surpasses our wildest imagination.

In June this blog had a short article entitled "Shekel Wise Dollar Foolish" describing how much the Shekel has appreciated relative to the Dollar.

Knowing Israel's propensity to express gratitude I wrote the following as my comment under the title The Shekels rise and the Dollar's fall:

"Want to make a bet how long it will take for Israel to refuse American financial assistance in Dollars and demand it to be paid out in Shekels?"

Nobody has expressed interest in betting against my preposterous idea, but then again we have become used to the fact that reality surpasses even the wildest and sickest ideas that we might dream up!

The funny thing is that formally we are talking about US loans to Israel, and a borrower in his right mind would never demand to take on debt obligations in a currency which is gaining strength. Therefore, what makes it logical is that Israeli debt to the US is never paid back but routinely forgiven!

The US financial assistance is not conditional, and it is not project finance. It is not given to attain specific, agreed goals, it is simply a generous financial handout, it is unilateral because Israel wants the US money but it would never accept any form of accountability for it.

So the relationship between the two parties is like that of a (formerly) rich man who is stopped in the street by a well dressed beggar. Having difficulty in accepting his new financial reality the man gives the beggar generously money that he himself borrowed from others.

But the beggar refuses: He is a prudent beggar and does not want to assume risks involved in accepting the man's dubious money.

The man has a good heart, and in the spirit of Yom Kippur he accepts to hand over his remaining blank checks (when you assume a financial obligation of unknown magnitude you are in fact issuing blank checks) well knowing that they will bounce anyhow.

Happy Yom Kippur!

P.S. By the way it is claimed that the acute reason for the attack on Iraq was caused by the fact that Saddam Hussein had started to demand payment of oil in EUROS, and the same issue is being given a lot of attention when it comes to the assessment of the likelihood of a US attack on Iran. If applying the same logic the US should nuke Israel as well when it is mobilized for destruction of the region anyway. Please do not misunderstand me: I do not want any country to be nuked, but the perspective might offer helpful input to a process driven by insanity.

-you have no idea how popular this blog of yours is on the myspace bulletin board circuit. It's being reposted ad infinitum by the outraged myspace anti-Zionist crew who have obviously swallowed it hook, line and sinker. I've emailed a couple of them, but there's no way I'm emailing them all.

I absolutely love it, but I think these satires need to be more prominently labeled for what they are, especially ones this well-written and (unbelievably) believable.

this site is anti-zionist, not anti-Jewish. Nice try.

CoZ, the post is labeled "satire" and "gotcha" and it's fairly easy to notice as soon as you get to the bottom.

The problem is - Americans and everyone else in the world are so used to watching israel ask for (and get) special treatment from the US that this scenario is entirely believable, as outrageous as it is.

Whose fault is that?

Certainly, not the author of the satire.

we will back it up with future sales on interstellar planetoids, stars etc. We have right to do so since no US or an other flag is pinned on them till now. They have oil, gold, WMDs that support their currency but mineral resources only in our galaxy are priceless. What the heck we will even give a 50% discount to first 6 billion callers. We can call it $Milkem and its initial value should be 1 on 1 with Euro. What say you?! Once we sell half of galaxy we may help US repay its debt to Federal Reserve. But no profits from this colossal venture will ever be allowed for Ziostan. Agreed?
