Iraqi Resistance Report for events of Monday, 2 April 2007
Al-Fallujah.

Americans imprison nine-year-old boy as hostage.

In a dispatch posted at 7:13 GMT Monday, Quds Press reported that US troops had arrested a nine-year-old child after he told them that his father is in the Islamic Army Resistance organization.

A teacher in a primary school in al-Karmah, 7km east of al-Fallujah, told Quds Press that US forces went around a number of schools in al-Karmah, distributing gifts and candy to the children. The Americans then asked the children such things as, "What do you think about the Resistance?", "What do you think about the Americans?", "Does your father like the Resistance?", and "What does your father do for a living?"

The teacher, who asked not to be identified, told Quds Press that one of the children, a nine-year-old named Ahmad Fadil 'Abdallah al-Jumayli, chatted away casually and told the Americans that his father was a Resistance fighters with the Islamic Army and that he was away from home and did not bring him any presents. On hearing that, the Americans arrested the boy and told the school principal that he must tell the boy's relatives that his father has to turn himself in if he wants his son to be released.

Quds Press noted that this is not the first time that the US military have arrested children in order to force their parents to surrender. The Americans regularly take women hostage, too, in order to force their husbands, brothers, sons, or fathers to surrender to the occupation forces.
