A Michigan man was harassed, handcuffed, assaulted, branded "unpatriotic" and subjected to an unconstitutional search of his vehicle during which drugs were allegedly planted, before being ticketed by a police officer for the apparent crime of freely distributing DVD's about 9/11 truth earlier this month.

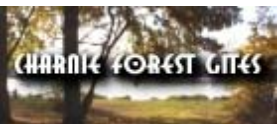

Josh Skoll was driving in his car when he noticed a slowly moving vehicle without its lights on in front of him. The vehicle's light were turned on shortly after Josh passed the car, identifying it as a Livonia "Charger" police cruiser. Josh stopped about 10 seconds later to continue delivering free 9/11 truth DVD's to homes along his route before the police officer began to question him.

The officer asked Skoll who the owner of the house he had stopped at was, to which Skoll responded that he didn't know, upon which the officer told him that he needed a permit to hand out free DVD's and ordered him to return to his vehicle.

The officer then ran Josh's license plate and ordered him to again step out of his vehicle. As soon as Skoll exited the vehicle, he was slapped in handcuffs and threatened with arrest.

With increasing anger, the officer slammed Josh against the car and announced that he would search his vehicle before detaining Skoll inside the police cruiser.

Shortly after proceeding with the unconstitutional search, the cop returned with a small bag of marijuana that Skoll claims was planted. Skoll noted later that his other belongings had hardly been moved during the search.

The image shows a Michigan Uniform Law Citation form. At the top, it is titled "State of Michigan Uniform Law Citation" with the citation number "L 279654". The form includes fields for "The People of the State of Michigan" (City of Livonia), "THE UNDERSIGNED" (Name of the officer), "SAYS THAT ON" (Date and time), "AT OR NEAR" (Location), and "WITHIN" (City of Livonia). The "MCL OR PACC CODE" section lists various violations, with "207.44" circled in red. A handwritten note "PASSING OUT 9-11 CD'S" is written in the "OFFENSE" column next to the circled code. The form also includes a section for "OTHER OFFENSES", a "CHECK IF APPROPRIATE" section, and a "SENDER'S SIGNATURE" section. The bottom of the form includes the address "15145 FRANKLIN ROAD, LIVONIA, MICHIGAN 48154" and the phone number "PHONE (734) 465-2500".

The police officer defined Skoll's crime as "passing out 9-11 CD's" on his citation ticket.

The officer continued to voice more threats asking Josh why he shouldn't be taken jail before interrogating him about the information contained on the DVD's he had been freely distributing. Despite Skoll's best efforts to explain, the cop dismissed him as "unpatriotic," "unfit for the military" and "too young to have an opinion."

Josh was eventually allowed to leave but not before being cited for a misdemeanor and given a ticket. The comments section of the ticket reads "passing out 9-11 CD's," which is supposedly now a crime in police state America. Skoll's court date is to be set within the next few weeks.

Skoll is not the first to be harassed and abused by police for handing out free information.

In 2004, Kelly Rushing was charged with making "terroristic threats" after he handed out Alex Jones' videos and recordings of a Ron Paul speech on C-Span to Lyon County, Kentucky officials and Kentucky State Trooper Lewis Dobbs.

A jury later ruled in favor of Rushing but he continues to be harassed by authorities and local law enforcement.
