Nicolas Sarkozy, France's new president, is allegedly a conservative. So the French were befuddled that, as soon as he was elected, he appointed to high-ranking official positions several leaders of the rival social-democratic party.

However, Sarkozy is above all a Jew. He simply appointed other Jews. Jews are helping each other, and the different political parties to which they belong is secondary. In fact, the French Jews set up two different parties, the conservative and the socialist, to give the illusion of free choice. In reality, the French voters had only the choice between Jews and Jews.

- Sarkozy appointed social-democrat Jew Bernard Kouchner to foreign minister.
- Sarkozy appointed social-democrat Jew Dominique Strauss-Kahn to head the International Monetary Fund.
- Sarkozy appointed on July 11 social-democrat Jew Jack Lang to a committee working on the reform of French institutions.

His campaign was supported by prominent Jewish social-democrats Simone Veil and Arno Klarsfeld. Jewish power is consolidating its grip over France.
