

USA Firings: Rove's Plan to Win in '08 (Arkansas Firing was NO Coincidence)

by EmperorHadrian

Thu Mar 15, 2007 at 06:22:13 PM PDT

I was just watching Olbermann. Olbermann's guest was a Dallas Morning News Writer. This person wrote "Bush's Brain" and is an expert on Karl Rove. He said something that I think is groundbreaking: That the US Attorney firings were Karl Rove's deliberate plan to win the 2008 elections, and take congress back for the GOP. Not only that, but this person believes that there can be no doubt that the replacement of Bud Cummins with Rove's deputy and former RNC opposition researcher in Little Rock, Arkansas, was a deliberate step in order for republicans to defeat a Hillary Clinton presidential candidacy.

EmperorHadrian's diary :: ::

This is Earth Shattering. Alberto Gonzalez may have perjured himself before congress over this. According to the author, Karl Rove is obsessed with the 2006 catasophy. Rove is convinced, beyond any shadow of a doubt, that the reason why republicans lost the house and senate was because of corruption. Specifically, it was because of US Attorneys who investigated and indicted republicans, such as Duke Cunningham. Karl Rove wants two things to happen in time for the 2008 election. First, he wants to stop the US Attorney investigations of republicans. The fact that several of the fired US Attorneys had been activity investigating republicans (such as Carol Lam, who was close to an indictment of republican Representative Jerry Lewis) seems to confirm this. Secondly, he wants to manufacture scandals against democrats, and hide the overt corruption behind the legitimacy of a US Attorney. He wants to make it so that republicans are no longer the party of corruption, and that democrats take their place. And if that means ignoring actual republican corruption, and inventing charges against democrats, then they will need the right US Attorneys to do this. They have already purged many of the US Attorneys who were investigating republicans, and replaced them with US Attorneys who would investigate democrats. Expect a wave of false indictments to come against democrat after democrat as we get closer to the election.

The other statement by this guy that just blew me away was with regards to a concept so simple that I cannot believe I hadn't thought of it. Bud Cummins, the US Attorney in Arkansas, didn't investigate many republicans. This makes sense, since the governor, both senators, 3 of the state's 4 US Congressmen, and all other statewide officeholders in Arkansas are democrats. Even the Arkansas state legislature is the second most democratic state legislature in the country, after the Massachusetts state legislature. So what Arkansas politician might Karl Rove be thinking of? There aren't many republicans in Arkansas for Bud Cummins to embarrass republicans over. This state involved the US Attorney replacement with the most substantive partisan resume of them all. And why was it that emails have showed that Karl Rove in particular wanted his chief deputy (who was the deputy at the time that this plan was being hatched), who also happened to be a former RNC opposition researcher, as the US Attorney in Arkansas? He was trying to install a partisan hack to bring down a Hillary Clinton general election campaign.

This has to be unprecedented. I heard a theory the other day which makes a lot of sense. Presidential power was very weak throughout the 19th century (other than during the presidency of Andrew Jackson and Abraham Lincoln). The president was also weak for the first third of the 20th century, with the exception of the Woodrow Wilson administration. Presidential power was strengthened during the entire New Deal. During the presidency of Richard Nixon, it reached its highest point. Nixon ended up breaking into the Watergate and covering up the break in (leading to his resignation), which occurred because he assumed that presidential power was absolute (remember, "if the president does it, that means it not illegal") and that congress had no right to keep him from doing anything. After Watergate, the democratic congress passed a series of laws (such as the FISA law and the series of laws that established the federal campaign finance infrastructure) that severely weakened the power of the president. Dick Cheney and Don Rumsfeld were in Washington at the time to witness the dismantling of presidential power. With divided government being the norm, presidential power remained relatively weak until the end of the Clinton administration. The combination of 9/11, Iraq, and the 6 years of (mostly) one-party government, presidential power was reawoken. One of Cheney's key goals during the last 6 years was to restore the power that the presidency had lost immediately following Watergate. It seems that they simply have taken this too far. Bush is pushing the power of the presidency beyond even what Richard Nixon attempted. Bush has become an American Tyrant. Does anyone think that if the Supreme Court ordered Bush to turn over those tapes (as they had done with Nixon), that Bush would have done what he was told? Or would he just have stood on the Rose Garden, smirking, and with the tapes burning behind him.

Tags: U.S. attorneys, Karl Rove, 2008 elections (all tags)

View Comments | 117 comments

Covering the politics of crime and the crime in politics.

Your online source for liberal coverage of crime-related political and legal news.

Read more...

- * Clinton Challenges Poll Showing Obama Surge
- * In Massachusetts, Patrick Shakes Up Staff
- * McCain's Fashion Sense
- * Quote of the Day
- * McCain Edges Giuliani in New Hampshire Poll
- * D.C. House Seat Bill Advances
- * Where Will Meehan's Cash Go?
- * California Moves Up Primary
- * Bonus Quote of the Day
- * Obama Erases Gap with Clinton

Read more...

The REAL State of the Union Address

Ever wonder what would happen if Bush wrote his

Our Anti-War T-shirt is Illegal in Two States

It may soon be banned in your state. Features names of 3,155 fallen troops. As seen on CNN, NPR, FOX, USA Today etc. Get yours while you can! We only support liberal causes and candidates. Shirts, magnetic bumper stickers, fridge magnets, bike stickers, etc. BE NICE TO AMERICA OR WE'LL BRING DEMOCRACY TO YOUR COUNTRY. If you're not outraged, you're not paying attention. BRING THEM HOME Impeach Bush! COEXIST. Well behaved women seldom make history.

CarryaBigSticker.com.
Enter code KOS for 5% off.

Read more...

Cape Cod Vacation

Looking to vacation on Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard or Nantucket? How about renting a home? It's cheaper, more spacious, and better equipped than a hotel. We feature 3000 homes, and you specify date, price, location, and amenities (internet, beach, pool, etc.). Quick example: 8 people, 1 week, 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, 4 TVs, pool, jacuzzi, grill, and a short walk to the beach: $2000. Think it's too good to be true? Check out property ID #9827.

Read more...

It's Time to Stop NCLB

NCLB requires the use of materials and procedures more likely to produce a passive, compliant workforce than creative, resilient, inquiring, critical, compassionate, engaged members of our democracy. If we want a citizenry capable of detecting corruption, cronyism, and incompetence, we must educate them into existence. NCLB does the opposite.

Read more...

Support Bloggers' Rights!

Candidates

Blue Majority Candidates

Daily Kos homepage

© Kos Media, LLC

Site content may be used for any purpose without explicit permission unless otherwise specified.

Privacy Policy

Powered by Scoop.