

Transparency Report: Government Requests

Like other technology and communications companies, we regularly receive requests from government agencies around the world to remove content from our services, or provide information about users of our services and products. This map shows the number of requests that we received in six-month blocks with certain limitations.

We're still learning the best ways to collect and preserve this information. We'll continue to improve this tool and fine-tune the types of data we display.
