Joe Stack and the Coming of the Rage of Reason

CLICK HERE where you can read an opinion post discussing the mood out there. You know - the mood that seems to be expressed in the recent airplane crash in Austin, Texas. The post is called "Summer of Rage" --- Here is a snippet:

Where YOUR voice IS heard

" Seems Joe Stack got tired of the overreach of the government. Breaking news is the Austin IRS/CIA/FBI building just got slammed by Joe after he burned the house down and went all kamikaze on Big Brother. Would it be wrong to call this person a freedom loving patriot?"

Note: Below are a few links to catch you up on the plane crash story. As a nation we can't even have something as simple as a fed-up citizen leaving a suicide note, burning his house down, and crashing an airplane into the IRS building without intrigue.

Whether you agree with what he did or not - and I haven't heard anybody sympathizing with the IRS - it doesn't sound like a big mystery. Especially if you read his suicide note linked in one of the paragraphs below. In my opinion it ought to be required reading for all public serpents so they can see one that slipped through the "customer service" cracks.

But wait - there's more! We have speculation and rumor to deal with - why? Because there is no transparency hence zero trust in our own government. They have been caught lying so many times; the video footage is there to prove it, the records are there to prove it - that they can't even report the obvious with a sense of authority. And rightly so.

I wonder if you would agree that U.S. government agencies have zero credibility after you examine the stories below - how this airplane crash will be investigated differently and held to higher standards than other, very very very similar airplane crashes - yet they are all supposed to be held to the same standards and laws.

Watch Back

It doesn't take a "conspiracy theorist*" to consider every word and act originating with government or media-including their interpretations of the Austin plane crash event, as nothing more than a confusing liquor siphoned into our brains via their corporate-owned moonshine-media. For example - their inability to discriminate whether or not Joe Stack's act was; or was not; an act of terrorism.

My Apple dictionary says terrorism is:

" terrorism |'terə,rizəm|
noun
the use of violence and intimidation in the pursuit of political aims."

I've read Joe's note and am taking it at face value. From this point on without independent verification of all facts I believe absolutely, positively NOTHING the government or the moonshine media have to say about this event. NOTHING. I will stick with my own interpretation - that he was fed up and used violence to intimidate the IRS in an attempt to bring about a change in their policy. Why shouldn't I think that? I know how to read. An interpreter who needs a badge and a gun to "convince" me is obviously dumber than I am - I rely on my brain.

In the following article the media and our protectors ponder the existence of explosives since the aftermath seemed out of proportion to what one would expect from an airplane of this size of such fuel capacity. Sounds like a good idea to me. Ya' know that kind of reminds me of another couple of plane crashes..

Texas Plane Crash: Did Suicidal Pilot Joe Stack Have Explosives on Board?

In this video we see the building is only safe enough for our protectors to check out but nobody else. That's because our protectors know that when airplanes crash into buildings we can expect the building to collapse at free fall speed after converting itself into powder. This video discusses the absence of Joseph Stack's body so far. They are NOT calling this "Terrorism" YET - although it was an attack against a civilian target designed to strike fear into employees of the IRS according to the suicide note Joseph Stack left. They have to wait until the investigation is over before they can proclaim this an act of terrorism. I suppose the delay is so our protectors can determine whether calling this terrorism or not is politically advantageous or not.

Here is a link to Joseph Stack's suicide note, now being called "diatribe" "hate-filled" and a "manifesto" by our protectors, so we don't think Joseph Stack is a good guy for attacking an IRS building with an airplane. That's a good thing, because our protectors consider us little children who can't think for ourselves and, as such, they fear that we might start to cheer this frustrated and robbed man who had no course of action and seems to have taken the law into his own hands.

This may seem paradoxical but I'll bet Stack killed fewer people than the Austin police department this year. Any takers? It's only Feb.

The coming Age of Categorical Truth -is what you meant to say, John.

It is categorically true that there is no collective consciousness.

For consciousness, there's just you, me, that guy over there who feels justified in flying his airplane into the IRS building, -AND- those other (even more deluded) people - who think they are justified in what they do -because they work for something they think of as -the IRS-.

The IRS has no more collective consciousness than a school of minnows or a pod of Orcas.

You cannot be charged with murder for killing the IRS.

You cannot be charged with murder for killing the US of A.

They call it something else when you try to kill the US of A.

They call it treason.

But in today's social environment, those believers are just grasping at straw.

Here's an issue I have not seen raised. Let's assume that the body count is right (1 gov't employee killed), then we can surmise the following:

Where the Hell is everyone? It's 9:40 am, shouldn't someone be working? By no means am I advocating any more casualties but it does beg the question, where the hell are the people who are supposed to be at work? Especially, when we are paying them. Any REAL business would have a complete workforce busy at work by 9:15 am, the latest. Only in the gov't is a workforce still absent by 9:40 am. I know it is not the main story but good God, work a full day.

"irs has no more collective consciousness than a school of minnows or a pod of Orcas"

Oh, minnows and Orcas DO have a Collective Consciousness. It's been known by Indigenous Peoples - Spiritual Peoples - Tribal Peoples - since the beginning of time.

And what's more, it's now been discovered by Science.

Joe has struck a chord with many in this country whether he was on the plane or not. Sure it was strange there were so few people around at 9:40 am on a work day but absolutely nothing in this matrix is what it appears to be.

However if the PTB are trying to get people to act on their anger in order to clamp down even more this was probably a successful move, it will put that idea in the minds of at least a few.
