

Climategate U-turn as scientist at centre of row admits: There has been no global warming since 1995

By Jonathan Petre

Last updated at 5:12 PM on 14th February 2010

- Data for vital 'hockey stick graph' has gone missing
- There has been no global warming since 1995
- Warming periods have happened before - but NOT due to man-made changes

---

Data: Professor Phil Jones admitted his record keeping is 'not as good as it should be'

---

The academic at the centre of the 'Climategate' affair, whose raw data is crucial to the theory of climate change, has admitted that he has trouble 'keeping track' of the information.

Colleagues say that the reason Professor Phil Jones has refused Freedom of Information requests is that he may have actually lost the relevant papers.

Professor Jones told the BBC yesterday there was truth in the observations of colleagues that he lacked organisational skills, that his office was swamped with piles of paper and that his record keeping is 'not as good as it should be'.

The data is crucial to the famous 'hockey stick graph' used by climate change advocates to support the theory.

Professor Jones also conceded the possibility that the world was warmer in medieval times than now – suggesting global warming may not be a man-made phenomenon.

And he said that for the past 15 years there has been no 'statistically significant' warming.

The admissions will be seized on by sceptics as fresh evidence that there are serious flaws at the heart of the science of climate change and the orthodoxy that recent rises in temperature are largely man-made.

Professor Jones has been in the spotlight since he stepped down as director of the University of East Anglia's Climatic Research Unit after the leaking of emails that sceptics claim show scientists were manipulating data.

The raw data, collected from hundreds of weather stations around the world and analysed by his unit, has been used for years to bolster efforts by the United Nation's Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change to press governments to cut carbon dioxide emissions.

Following the leak of the emails, Professor Jones has been accused of 'scientific fraud' for allegedly deliberately suppressing information and refusing to share vital data with critics.

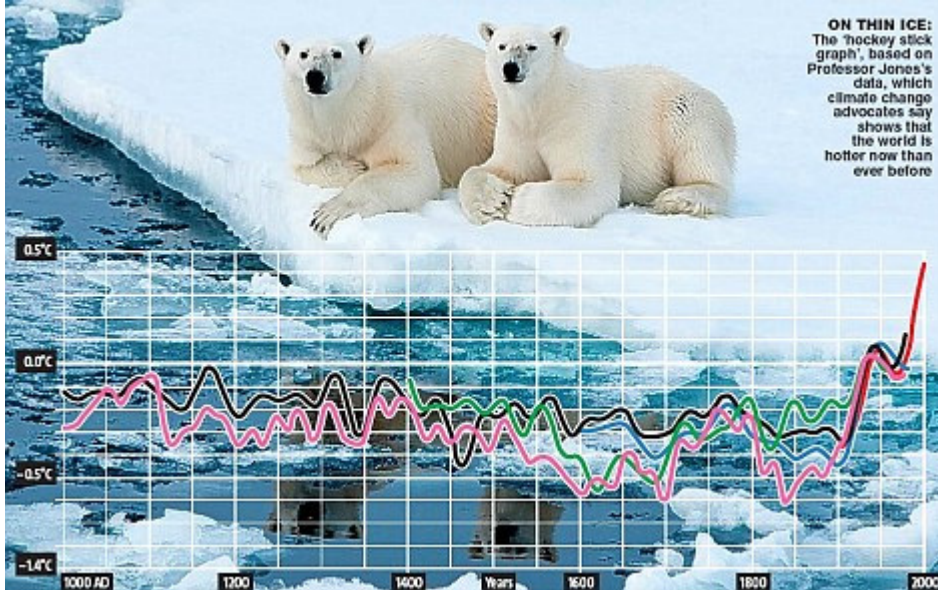

Discussing the interview, the BBC's environmental analyst Roger Harrabin said he had spoken to colleagues of Professor Jones who had told him that his strengths included integrity and doggedness but not record-keeping and office tidying.

Mr Harrabin, who conducted the interview for the BBC's website, said the professor had been collating tens of thousands of pieces of data from around the world to produce a coherent record of temperature change.

That material has been used to produce the 'hockey stick graph' which is relatively flat for centuries before rising steeply in recent decades.

According to Mr Harrabin, colleagues of Professor Jones said 'his office is piled high with paper, fragments from over the years, tens of thousands of pieces of paper, and they suspect what happened was he took in the raw data to a central database and then let the pieces of paper go because he never realised that 20 years later he would be held to account over them'.

Asked by Mr Harrabin about these issues, Professor Jones admitted the lack of organisation in the system had contributed to his reluctance to share data with critics, which he regretted.

But he denied he had cheated over the data or unfairly influenced the scientific process, and said he still believed recent temperature rises were predominantly man-made.

Asked about whether he lost track of data, Professor Jones said: 'There is some truth in that. We do have a trail of where the weather stations have come from but it's probably not as good as it should be.'

'There's a continual updating of the dataset. Keeping track of everything is difficult. Some countries will do lots of checking on their data then issue improved data, so it can be very difficult. We have improved but we have to improve more.'

He also agreed that there had been two periods which experienced similar warming, from 1910 to 1940 and from 1975 to 1998, but said these could be explained by natural phenomena whereas more recent warming could not.

He further admitted that in the last 15 years there had been no 'statistically significant' warming, although he argued this was a blip rather than the long-term trend.

And he said that the debate over whether the world could have been even warmer than now during the medieval period, when there is evidence of high temperatures in northern countries, was far from settled.

Sceptics believe there is strong evidence that the world was warmer between about 800 and 1300 AD than now because of evidence of high temperatures in northern countries.

But climate change advocates have dismissed this as false or only applying to the northern part of the world.

Professor Jones departed from this consensus when he said: 'There is much debate over whether the Medieval Warm Period was global in extent or not. The MWP is most clearly expressed in parts of North America, the North Atlantic and Europe and parts of Asia.'

'For it to be global in extent, the MWP would need to be seen clearly in more records from the tropical regions and the Southern hemisphere. There are very few palaeoclimatic records for these latter two regions.'

'Of course, if the MWP was shown to be global in extent and as warm or warmer than today, then obviously the late 20th Century warmth would not be unprecedented. On the other hand, if the MWP was global, but was less warm than today, then the current warmth would be unprecedented.'

Sceptics said this was the first time a senior scientist working with the IPCC had admitted to the possibility that the Medieval Warming Period could have been global, and therefore the world could have been hotter then than now.

Professor Jones criticised those who complained he had not shared his data with them, saying they could always collate their own from publicly available material in the US. And he said the climate had not cooled 'until recently – and then barely at all. The trend is a warming trend'.

Mr Harrabin told Radio 4's Today programme that, despite the controversies, there still appeared to be no fundamental flaws in the majority scientific view that climate change was largely man-made.

But Dr Benny Pieser, director of the sceptical Global Warming Policy Foundation, said Professor Jones's 'excuses' for his failure to share data were hollow as he had shared it with colleagues and 'mates'.

He said that until all the data was released, sceptics could not test it to see if it supported the conclusions claimed by climate change advocates.

He added that the professor's concessions over medieval warming were 'significant' because they were his first public admission that the science was not settled.

Places:

Europe,

Asia

Comments (417)

- Newest
- Oldest
- Best rated
- Worst rated

View all

To rub salt in the wound - Brown has just bought £60,000,000 of "Carbon Credits" from the EU to keep the offices of the following departments "warm" in the cold weather:

General public services.

Defence.

Public order and safety.

Environment.

Economic and financial affairs.

Health.

Housing and community amenities.

Social protection.

Recreation, culture and religion.

Education.

(See Tenders electronic daily of the EU 10/02/2010)

It doesn't matter about the soldiers in Afghanistan, the freezing pensioners, or anybody else, Brown is spending YOUR money buying absolutely nothing than the air that surrounds us.

- Steve, Warrington,Cheshire, 14/2/2010 21:14

Click to rate  Rating (0)

Report abuse

Jeezus, guys, when ya gonna get it? Man made global warming is a scam? It's a lie. It's the biggest lie since the suggestion that 'being good' was the key to eternal life! Wake up, you're being conned!

- Mike, Cowbridge, Wales, 14/2/2010 21:12

Click to rate  Rating (0)

Report abuse

If he doesn't know if he's lost his papers or not.....maybe he's not sure what his name is.....or what he does for a living.....or if it's Wednesday or March.

Perhaps we shouldn't be listening to this man. Eh Gordon?

- Voyager, Tring....and the world, 14/2/2010 20:34

Click to rate __ Rating 25

Report abuse

The Bible teaches that people were put on the earth to look after it. Therefore we should take care and not be wasteful and wantonly destroy the earth. So a responsible attitude should be encouraged to look out for our planet for our future generations.

- Chris, Cumbria, 14/2/2010 20:28

Click to rate __ Rating 19

Report abuse

Who's the "flat earther" now Brown?

How settled is the science NOW Milliband?

Where's my money Darling. ( this is not a Valentine)

- Voyager, Tring....and the world, 14/2/2010 20:23

Click to rate __ Rating 40

Report abuse

Another thing, "carbon trading" China pumps out more carbon than US but can trade their rating with eg seychelles, get a zero carbon rating and no extra taxes, simples.

the atmosphere needs 380 parts per million to get plants to grow , 1,000 ppm for optimum growth of crops, forests, grass etc....

present about 360ppm so we need 3x present level of co2 to get most from our farming!

if you cremate people co2 goes into atmosphere immediately, burying is more eco-friendly, but takes land, slow release of co2, that's assuming you believe like green party assembly member jenny jones, telling junior school children "we all going to die in bed in a great flood"

the "carbon trading" bubble will go the same way as "financial" bubble "property" bubble etc

yes folks it really is Death&Taxes

- robin, london, ENGLAND, 14/2/2010 20:22

Click to rate __ Rating 19

Report abuse

The views expressed in the contents above are those of our users and do not necessarily reflect the views of MailOnline.

- Today's headlines
- Most Read
- Police launch murder probe after girl, five, 'driven into icy river by her father' loses fight for life
- Met Office warns Britain to brace itself for more heavy snow
- Now Climategate scientist admits: There has been no global warming since 1995
- Immigrants to be taught the fine British art of how to queue
- BNP votes to allow blacks and Asians to join party
- David Cameron accused of 'bussing in' Tory supporters to pose as students during speech on 'openness and trust'
- Former jockey and best-selling author Dick Francis dies at 89
- Children paid by junk food firms to secretly push products among their friends
- Revealed: BBC scriptwriters tried to use Doctor Who to bring down Margaret Thatcher
- Goldie Hawn in talks with Tories to set up UK school to teach children breathing exercises
- Welsh rugby star arrested after driving golf buggy towards M4 after celebrating Six Nations win
- Wealthy British grandmother stabbed to death in apartment in France
- Stars face massive payback demands as HMRC probes £2bn film tax loophole
- Female professor who 'shot dead three colleagues' killed her brother 20 years ago
- 'It's gone to plan': British military chiefs hail success of Operation Moshtarak in Afghanistan
- 'It makes me sick seeing pregnant stomachs': Insult behind Cameron Cutie debacle
- After Brown's tears, emotional Cameron tells TV of regrets following son's death
- Grandmother survives shark attack after punching it on the nose
- Heartbroken widow passes away at exact moment her husband is being laid to rest
- Top economists warn that Britain's economy is at risk and call for rapid deficit cut

- Attorney General demands new torture probe into 'confusion' over Binyam Mohamed findings
- Labour 'planning secret 10% death tax'
- UK's biggest ever lottery winner nets half of £113m EuroMillions jackpot \(and a Brit in Spain could get the other half\)
- Bloated BBC pays almost 400 staff more than £100,000 a year
- Gerry Adams: 'Sometimes I was in tune with Jesus and sometimes not'
- Horror as 15 people are injured after rogue wave swept them away at U.S. surfing contest
- MORE HEADLINES
- Stars face massive payback demands as taxman probes £2bn film loophole
- Climategate U-turn as scientist at centre of row admits: There has been no global warming since 1995
- 'It makes me sick seeing pregnant stomachs': The insult that lies behind 'Cameron Cutie' row
- Female professor who 'shot dead three university colleagues' killed her brother 20 years ago
- Horror as 15 people are injured after rogue wave swept them away at U.S. surfing contest
- Alexander McQueen's ex-partner throws a disturbing light on the 'hangers-on' who lionised him, but who never truly knew him
- British winner claims £56m Euro lottery jackpot as another lucky punter scoops £4.7m in UK draw
- St Valentine's Groundhog Day: For 31 years this loving husband has given his wife the same card - and each time his cryptic messages get more bizarre...
- Wealthy British grandmother stabbed to death in apartment in France 'after row with young lover'
- Chris Tarrant's ex-wife Ingrid fails to escape driving ban despite pleading poverty
- Girl, five, driven into icy river by her father loses fight for life
- Pensioner stranded 10 miles from home... after bus driver refuses to let him on with a tin of paint
- Hoots mon... where's your troosers: The moment a rugby fan revealed a little TOO much
- New England captain Rio Ferdinand's 'stag night fling with model'
- What a thumper! Ralph the rabbit 'breaks mum's record as world's biggest bunny'
- After Gordon Brown's tears, emotional David Cameron tells TV of his regrets following son's death
- Revealed: BBC scriptwriters tried to use Doctor Who to bring down Margaret Thatcher
- Postman wins £3,000 after damaging his darts finger in a letter box
- Terrifying moment luge racer died in 90mph crash at Winter Olympics
- Tributes to soldier killed in Afghanistan as British military chiefs say Operation Moshtarak has 'gone to plan'
- Goldie Hawn in talks with Tories to set up British school which teaches children breathing exercises
- No wonder you can never get through to the tax office... HMRC officials pose on Facebook with cardboard boxes on their heads
- 'My hell at the hands of Ali Dizaei': Victim of corrupt Met commander tells of campaign of intimidation
- Labour accused of planning 'secret 10% death tax' in new row over elderly care
- MOST READ IN DETAIL

Published by Associated Newspapers Ltd
Part of the Daily Mail, The Mail on Sunday & Metro Media Group

© Associated Newspapers Ltd