Taliban militants say they have shot down a NATO helicopter in the troubled western Afghanistan amid rising casualties aging the US-led foreign forces there.

The incident took place in Farah Province on Saturday. The Taliban say at least 13 foreign soldiers were killed in the incident.

Afghan officials have confirmed the crash and launched an investigation into the event. They say it is still not clear what exactly caused the helicopter to go down.

There are currently over 120,000 foreign troops in Afghanistan, and the US and its NATO allies have announced the imminent deployment of 30,000 more troops.

@honestabe--My brother your reality of the Muslims is based on propaganda.The developed nations invade those peoples with their tanks,modern war aircraft, nuclear armoured ships etc. No Muslim nation has ever done this in the west.People have a right to defend themselves against iniustice.

To Fed up with stupidity : you must be fed up with yourself. Taliban are anything but cowards. They have only 26 thousand fighter with Kalashnikov and RPG. Could NATO fight them with the same armament?

Yusuf, You obviously have no grasp on reality. You Muslims say you are a peaceful people but all i hear from you is death. What are you doing to better portray your heritage and beliefs than spouting out more death speech. Grow up. It is not right for anybody to die especially because one group of people believes different then the other. It is childish and you sir are not helping the problem.
