The Skies Above Us
by C. L. Cook

The skies above my home in Victoria are mainly clear today, September 4th, 2010. Great bands of rainclouds drifting gently in from the Pacific are currently circling round us, promising rain later tonight, perhaps.

I qualify my forecast because as anyone who has lived on the wild west coast of Canada knows, the weather has its own schedule, and only a fool believes the weathermen here.

More predictable however is the appearance of the jet trail fliers. They arrive invariably in pairs, criss-crossing the skies over us for hours at a time, leaving long, spreading, toxic clouds that crisscross above and persist for hours, making of our evening air a grey murk.

I've watched these guys for years, but the last two days in Victoria were about as bad as I've ever seen for the chemical spraying of the skies above us.

But, it was not just Victoria; reports from Nanaimo concur, the whole southern half of Vancouver Island and beyond suffered under the onslaught of chemical application that began before dawn and was still overflying as the sun set.

Though sometimes a lovely orange as the sun slides below their horizon, the chemical tracks, or "chemtrails" serve as a disturbing portent of the coming world. Denied for years, their observers labelled "conspiracy nuts" and such, the reality of these things is as easy to verify as a simple gaze upwards. Looking there, you'll see them in most parts of the world, jets doggedly flying patterns, back and forth, east to west, north to south, trailing wide plumes that billow out of nozzles visible in pictures, and to anyone with a telescope and steady hand.

But what are they; and, more importantly, what is that stuff being sprayed so persistently into the atmosphere?

Though these chemtrail flights have been commented upon for more than a decade, there is still very little on the official record to answer these simple questions. It would be easy enough to access flight plans, if such things were filed, to trace the operators. The planes flying these missions are as large as passenger liners, and after the 9/11 attacks, one assumes every jet liner flying over population centres is duly authorized, logged, and tracked. But not these; why not? How is it something in plain sight can remain clouded in mystery for so long? How is it possible a great and ugly "fact on the ground" can be so persistently ignored, or denied in those rare instances comment is made?

As to the materials jettisoned from them, try asking your local health authority about it. In my town, the local health officer is fixated on cigarettes, the smoking of which is banned in every public building in the city, and on balconies too; but ask them what is filling the airshed above our town, and making its tourist-friendly blue skies grey and you're likely to be invited to exit the building before the police arrive. We're all familiar with the truism: "What goes up, must come down," but who knows what is coming down, and why won't they tell us the truth about it?

I say this is portent of our coming world, but in reality it is the past that is prologue. For years we wealthy have ignored the poverty that ravishes the rest of the world. We have watched largely silent as millions died of war and disease, pestilence and famine. We ignore the reality of the bloodthirsty necessities employed to "protect our interests around the world," sacrificing our humanity for vague promises of physical security. And, we have ignored the horrendous damage our rapaciousness has wrecked on the ecosystem, and for our non-human fellow Earthlings.

So, what's the big deal about a little smoke in the sky? I'd like to know a few things:

- 1) I demand to know who is flying these missions.
- 2) I demand to know what they are introducing into our environment.
- 3) I demand to know why they are introducing these unknown elements.
- 4) I demand to know when these flights will stop.

I'm not alone in making these demands. Around the country, and around the world, citizens are looking up with the same kinds of questions and concerns, and they too want answers.

We are beginning on Vancouver Island to form an alliance. Already, watchers are poised with cameras, recording these events. We are now ready to reach out to those silently worrying about this issue, and are inviting your participation.

The photos and video presented here were all recorded over a two day period, the first two days of September 2010, by regular people who live on Vancouver Island. They are the beginning of a campaign to address our shared concerns.

There are many theories about these flights and their true purpose. I don't know the answers to the questions above, and I feel speculation at this juncture is no substitute for information and a substantive response from those within the ministries and departments responsible for the health and well-being of the population and environment; but until that is forthcoming, I suggest citizens take action.

If the government is unwilling to act in your interest, as it appears, and refuses to take seriously your inquiries and intelligence, as is also abundantly obvious, then it's time to seek redress without them.

Kirstin Adds:

There is a Weather Modification Act R.S.B.C. 1996, c.486 (repealed) (New), and a new Weather Modification Regulation B.C. Reg. 512/75 (New) at the below website link but I cannot get in to read the Acts. I have a copy of the Weather Modification Act and will post when I can get to that link again. Apparently, if we read these documents and know who to ask (laid out in the Act) they are required to give us the information of what the f#*k they think they are doing. My/our MPs apparently do not have the info and are not in the "chain of command" to ask. The chain of command is laid out in the Act.

thanks chris, now I know who's doing it: Satanic Corporate slave masters which is what I suspected. Estee has sent me pics from Colwood, and they were tediously and; thanks for Estee's pics and website:

I noticed a comment by a Katherine and responded to it. It's a day that changed my life and as a result I started a website on public awareness on what is really happening in our skies here in Victoria. It's alarming.

A good place to get a handle on this toxic sky writing is Will Thomas http://www.willthomasonline.net/willthomasonline/CHEMTRAILS_CONFIRMED.html

Will lives in a boat on Hornby, is an independent journalist with integrity who has written and talked eloquently on many of these topics including an excellent early summary of 911 called All Fall Down. Listen to his radio interviews on chemtrails.

Observed on the lower mainland at least as far as the beach at Sliammon (just north of Powell River) where I watched while visiting family. Exactly as you describe.

Sky Stripes

written by Ted, September 04, 2010

I discovered sky stripes on the Island almost 2 years ago. I picketed in Duncan and in Victoria with We Are Change, I went to everyone in every level of government, sent letters to the RCMP, Police and then finally, I sent the Governor General a letter charging Harper with treason. No response. They are not our leaders. Our leaders are pulling their strings. They are puppets. G20 is an example. I left the Island primarily because of sky stripes. Yes, they are everywhere, but given a winter of cloud, they can hide their spray above the clouds easily - and they do - 24/7 on the island. They spray populated areas. The prairie rains, washouts and floods a direct result. The damage to Mother Earth is reaching the scale of the Gulf false flag event. God help us. Say your prayers. Only he is listening.

Any chance the "chemtrails" are just the hydrogen in the fuel combining with the oxygen in the air and making water vapour that is condensing in the cold air?

NO

"Any chance the "chemtrails" are just the hydrogen in the fuel combining with the oxygen in the air and making water vapour that is condensing in the cold air?"

You actually answered your own question. Chemtrails do not vapourize, if they did they would disappear within minutes of being expelled from the plane, much like your car on a cold winter day. Chemtrails hang in the air for hours and get bigger.
