About this Site and Please Volunteer

THIS WEDNESDAY - April 15th at 6PM Eastern - We will hold a conference call and webinar to discuss our objectives and how you can help as a volunteer, whether that is simply forwarding information or an active role in this website. Register in advance for conference call access codes - <https://www2.gotomeeting.com/register/820218850> If you miss the call, it will be posted here as a replay.

About this Site: Born on March 26, 2009, this website is an open forum for facts and discussion about what part Goldman Sachs and their executives played in the current Global Economic Crisis. This site is NOT affiliated with Goldman Sachs, nor has this site been approved by Goldman Sachs. In fact, Goldman Sachs has threaten to file a lawsuit to shut down this website.

Information: If you have helpful links, articles or any kind of information relevant to exposing Goldman Sachs for it's part in the worldwide financial crisis, please email me Mike@GoldmanSachs666.com

Content: Please do NOT submit comments or information with any profanities or those that are purely malicious attacks or commentary. We welcome facts and comments to build a library of useful information. If you see an offensive or incorrect post, please notify me immediately and it will be removed.

Volunteer: Without volunteers, this website will be nothing more than one of the thousands out there that fade into the mist. If you have time to research the Internet for information to post to this website, we'd welcome to have you on as a volunteer. If we get enough interest, we will build a fully integrated website to replace this blog. Please email me at Mike@GoldmanSachs666.com - If you're Mad as Hell and Not Going to Take It Anymore, then do something, scroll down to the bottom of this page for Volunteer Info.

If you can't volunteer, but you have the ability to hire someone part or full time to help with this website, please email me Mike@GoldmanSachs666.com And if you know some wealthy folks that would be interested in hiring a volunteer or two to help with this site, please pass the info along.

Sad Reality: As I write this at 5AM on Monday, April 13, we have had just 19 volunteers sign up for the webinar and conference call . . . even though we have had more than 72,000 visitors and hundreds of emails and posts. It just goes to show, most people get mad, but that's about it. With an 8.5% unemployment rate, you'd think there would be move volunteers or a few wealthy folks willing to hire a few volunteers. No, instead, it looks like Goldman Sachs and the other Economic Royalists will continue to run the world for their own benefit. Volunteer Webinar and Conference Call - Click Here

Disclosure: Yes, I am short Goldman Sachs stock. I believe this company is evil and should not exist. We need to begin to break up companies that have as much control over world finances as Goldman Sachs.

Volunteer Information

Without volunteers, this website will fade into the mist like all the others. But we have an opportunity to make this the very first REAL action website on the Internet. To do that we need volunteers to research and post. If you have time, great. If not, maybe you have an assistant or associate in your office or company that can help . . . even if that is one hour a week, ten hours a week or more.

I cannot accept financial contributions but I can accept the work of volunteers to make this a website that gets the attention of Washington. And if you have the financial ability to hire someone to assist (part or full-time) that would be FANTASTIC, even if it is just an hour or two a week. If you know some wealthy folks that would be interested in hiring a volunteer or two to help with this site, please pass the info along.

I can use all the help I can get. One thing that happens is people send me links and articles. Then I need to read them to see if they are relevant. Then I need to pull a paragraph or two and set it up as a post with the Headline, Live Link, etc. It's time consume, but even if I had 50 people that could do one of those a week, that would be great.

1 - My idea is to get a few volunteers to go out and find interesting posts for the blog I set up. I just posted a few where I simply use an excerpt and a link to the article. If we can get permission to post the entire piece that is fine, but the big guys will never do that. We may get that from

Is Goldman Sachs Manipulating the Stock Market? - It Sure Looks Like It

There was a very interesting article on Zero Hedge the other day. In the data provided, I noticed that Goldman Sachs traded more for their Principal account than the next 14 firms COMBINED. And the next 14 were no slouches . . . Citi, JP Morgan UBS, Credit Suisse, Merrill, Barclays, Deutsche Bank, BNP Paribas, etc.

I mention this because it seems a bit coincidental that the markets have skyrocket during this very same period, and Goldman Sachs' stock price has jumped more than 70% to just about back to where our dear friend Warren Buffet bought in. Their stock prices has more than doubled the performance of any of the US markets!

It's also interesting that this 74% meteoric rise comes when Goldman Sachs has decided to sell stock to pay back the TARP dollars . . . even though they told us they didn't need the money. Obviously, Lord Blankfein, you needed the money because you don't have it to pay back . . . and you don't even have the billions you got from AIG.

And one final note. Wasn't it Lord Blankfein that told us the billions they got from AIG were not material? If so, why do they need to sell stock to pension funds and other fiduciary pockets of money in order to repay TARP?

I just don't get it. Doesn't any at the SEC consider who is trading and what they are trading? You've got one company, Goldman Sachs, trading for their own account in Program Trading, more than the next 14 largest firms combined.

The SEC is only concerned with the uptick rule these days, and how to design more ways for companies like Goldman Sachs to take advantage of the markets.

Here's a link to the article I referenced above - <http://zerohedge.blogspot.com/2009/04/incredibly-shrinking-market-liquidity.html>

Mike, you or the volunteers should make a Link-graph showing the relationships of all Goldman current and past executives working in government and their "major" accomplishments in the past and current financial crisis.

A picture speaks a thousands words.

For example, the big tree itself is Goldman. Then in year order moving up (latest years at the top) are the executives that branch out to government or FED, and each of these people's role in the financial crisis. Paulson would be drawn as handing out $700 B other blogs, as they can take whatever we have. This is time consuming to find the pieces and then load them up, and I'd like to be able to put a few up every day.

2 – If this goes well, I will build a website where we will post all of the stuff from the blog, and this way we will get top ranking in Google.

3 – I also need a volunteer to screen and decide on comments we receive. This is relatively easy, with a basic quick read to make sure there is nothing offensive, no profanity and the comment is legitimate. Then it is nothing more than hitting the button to Publish or Reject.

4 – If all goes well, and we accumulate enough information, I want to write a book . . . How Goldman Sachs Destroyed the World

5 – I also want to start gathering information about where Goldman Sachs executives go. We know they are at the Bank of Italy, Bank of England, US Treasury, etc. Well, where else are they and what are they doing. This could be a book in itself. But if you have time to start Googling names of Goldman Sachs executives, you will see more names and more information. I need to get this info to one person to start outlining.

So that's where I'm at. If you think you can help, please feel free to call me at 772-260-5448 or email me at Mike@GoldmanSachs666.com
