PM Netanyahu told Spanish Premier Zapatero on Thursday that Israel and America have solved settlements row. (Tess Scheffan)

Just what could that mean? Obviously that the Obama administration has agreed to allow Israel to continue getting away with its policies of ethnic cleansing and the genocide of the Palestinian people.

After all, isn't that what a recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize is meant to do?

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told Spanish Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero last Thursday that talks between Israel and the United States over construction in the settlements on the West Bank had ended.

"We solved the matter of the settlements with the Americans," Netanyahu told his Spanish counterpart.

It is not clear what Netanyahu meant and what the details of the "solution" are, but this is the first time that Netanyahu has said that the issue of the settlements, which is the main bone of contention between the Obama administration and Israel, has been solved.
