[The article below does not use encrypted links because I believe there is value in reading the links themselves. The evidence against Monsanto has been carefully collected by many people over a long time and I'd like their personal dedication to exposing this corporation's actions to be more visible than "click here" or a phrase.]

In the anti Gm agitation in India they constantly come across a refrain from American scientists, the companies and their own Agri university scientists (many of whom are funded by these agri business corporations to develop and sell Gm crops) ...that Americans have been eating Gm foods for more than a decade and there is no adverse effect.....

The question is: Are there any studies in US about the effects of GM foods? There is concern there is no data or research as GM food has not been labelled and so Americans have lost 10 yrs of health data in the process.....

As the opposition to genetically engineered food is strengthening in the civil society, this refrain comes up very often and people are wondering how to counter it.

What is clear is that issue should be turned around. No one should be arguing defensively that there isn't enough data to say anything.

Instead, what should be focused on - coming in from every direction - is the immense amount of data on Monsanto itself and its anti-relationship with science. The data reveals Monsanto's disregard for, corruption of, purchase of, blocking of, crippling of, hiding of, denial of, attacks on ... science itself. Rather than asking how can anyone trust Monsanto's products, people can say plainly and factually that Monsanto itself cannot be trusted. All data indicates they are dangerous and lie about evidence they already possess, and about just how dangerous.

Their health claims are based on:

non-existence of evidence through intentional non-labeling at the Federal level the USDA stopped tracking even pesticides (Monsanto's product). Here is a case where it is obvious the product is highly toxic and even deadly yet Monsanto was able to stop all basic data collection.

faked evidence

enforced non-labeling GM-food contravenes the most basic science requirement of all - the Nuremberg Code requiring informed consent in any human experiments the public has no way to opt out of exposure to a technology that was never tested on humans except now on them

Even without labeling, even with covering up evidence, preventing it from emerging, buying off university science departments, eliminating basic tracking of data, corrupting government agencies, firing scientists, faking evidence, and the rest, there is some significant suggestive things which have happened to American health since genetic engineering took over here.

Distinguishing MONSANTO's totalitarian "use of science"

Monsanto is the War Criminal of Food.

They have gone out of their way to put their dangerous GM Food on the Food Table without any long term testing.

The Worlds populations are being subjected to long term testing of GM Food without consumers knowing it.

Previously the testing was done on rats, etc before the human populations were subjected the new food.

This goes against the whole Idea of our health being protected by our Government agriculture, and health departments.

OUR government agencies have given this back to the Fox; Monsanto.

They have sold out to Monsanto and Ilk, and even have the arrogance of denying their populations of labelling so we can make a choice.

All I can say is the people are going to hold their governments responsible, and that includes the senior employees.
