Rumsfeld to stand trial for war crimes?

Tue, 27 Jan 2009 16:06:02 GMT

A UN official says there is enough evidence that former US defense secretary Donald Rumsfeld could be brought to justice for war crimes.

Rumsfeld (L) knew about tortures.

The United Nations Special Rapporteur on Torture Manfred Nowak in an interview on Monday told CNN that the international body had enough evidence to prosecute Rumsfeld for his direct authorization of tortures at US detention centers in 2002.

"We have clear evidence," Nowak said. "In our report that we sent to the United Nations, we made it clear that former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld clearly authorized torture methods and he was told at that time by Alberto Mora, the legal council of the Navy, 'Mr. Secretary, what you are actually ordering here amounts to torture.' So, there we have the clear evidence that Mr. Rumsfeld knew what he was doing but, nevertheless, he ordered torture."

The UN torture official earlier in an interview with Germany's ZDF television had said that "I think the evidence is on the table."

Nowak said that the United States had an "obligation" to probe former President George Bush's Administration for their involvement in torture.

A bipartisan Senate survey last month revealed that Rumsfeld and other high-ranking administration officials were responsible for detainee abuse at Guantanamo Bay Prison.

The Los Angeles Times said on December 12, 2008 that the report directed its most pointed criticism at Rumsfeld's decision in December 2002 to authorize the use of harsh interrogation techniques at the Guantanamo Bay facility. The report described Rumsfeld's directive as "a direct cause for detainee abuse" at Guantanamo and concluded that it "influenced and contributed to the use of abusive techniques, including military working dogs, forced nudity and stress positions, in Afghanistan and Iraq."

The coercive measures were based on a document signed by Bush in February, 2002.

US new President Barack Obama has ordered for the notorious US facility at Guantanamo to be shut down. But the so-called "enhanced interrogation techniques" have already destroyed the lives of many who had kept for years at US prisons worldwide without even charges.

Former Pakistani Guantanamo Bay prisoner, Mohammad Saad in Lahore

"It's too painful, it's too deep, it's too dark and fills me with sadness... They did everything they could to destroy me when I was completely innocent," says former US detainee Mohammad Saad describing six years of humiliation, interrogation and ill-treatment under US orders in Egypt, Afghanistan and Guantanamo Bay.

They should all be up on charges, but Obama will let them walk away scott free. Obama is related to Bush and Cheney, so while he is in office they will never serve a day in prison! lou3946

This is great news. Put George Bush, Dick Channey, Rumsfeld , Rove all on trial. They must be responsible for their criminal actions and profits.

"It is not a conservative/liberal issue, but rather a question of what sort of people we are" (Phil) We Americans are complicit because there is no outrage, only apathy because we are not Muslims. How despicable! How barbaric we are! We are barbarians.

I hope Rumsfeld will be tried, but I won't hold my breath. The world's governments are run by human demons who sacrifice children to the Devil and then devour their blood and flesh. I am not speaking figuratively! As long as these subhumans are in power, nothing will change.

Hi, my name is Joshua, and I live in Israel. I know that Israel might over reacted during the Gaza war, but I think that we & the Palestinians can live in peace side by side. I know that some of you think that Mahmoud Abbas is a traitor, and he didn't get anything for West Bank, but that's not true. Palestinians are living peacefully in West Bank, and even some of the Palestinians are enjoying a lavish Life in West Bank. Please, see the above Short Video: For sure it will change your mind.

Gitmo was and is a sham put on by real criminals in Washington, D.C.. The perps will never be tried, convicted or sentenced: they become the figure heads and lobbyists of large corporations. The rule of law is nothing but a dream gone sour. Live with it, world, things will not get better... --jws

Why would not a person want a torturer to be tortured when in fact he knew he was doing it even at the thought that the people he orders to be tortured are most likely not guilty? This to me is complete sadism and all that played a part in it, surely must be punished for their despicable attitude. I would absolutely LOVE to see the whole of the Bush Administration up for war crimes...BRING IT ON!!

Phil

I'm a former Navy pilot. In our Code of Conduct training it was emphasized that Geneva Conventions, being ratified by the Senate, were Federal Law. We were also told directly that once someone surrenders, we become responsible for them. Torture, were we taught, would never be tolerated. Those who might would dishonor the uniform and dishonor America. It would be punished harshly. It is not a conservative/liberal issue, but rather a question of what sort of people we are.

What strange group of commenters above. Imagine believing that prisoners held at Gitmo or El Grhaib are guilty before being tried. Imagine wanting to torture them to find out if they are guilty. Might as well bring back the witch trials of the 1600s. Where do these brain deads come from, the Ozarks? Are they so inbred they have only mush for brains? Why do they hate the Constitution? What happened to the oath to allegiance they recited at school every day? Oh, sorry they never attended school.

Bill

Tue, 27 Jan 2009 20:45:15 GMT

At the end of the day, they are using us once again to move their one world government agenda forward. Problem, reaction, solution. You create a problem to get a reaction from the people and then you offer up your solution. They have been using this technique for thousands of years and we fall for it everytime. Maybe we should not fall for it this time.

Bill

Tue, 27 Jan 2009 20:42:41 GMT

They needed to restart the poppies and heroin, they wanted to invade Iraq to erase artifacts that show our true origins, they needed to install new totalitarian laws in the US and of course do horrendous things that will cause the UN to take control of the US so it can be merged with Canada and Mexico and eventually the world government.

Bill

Tue, 27 Jan 2009 20:40:47 GMT

This is too be expected. Its part of the plan to totally discredit the USA so its people will accept the American Union. 9/11 had many levels or reasons. They needed the US people to rally behind the "president" while he moved the agenda forward, the towers needed to be brought down anyways due to rust and asbestos issues, they needed to have a two sided front against Iran this is great news I a glimmer of hope for justice, pity he's so old and senile and not far from death, he'll probably escape the charges, there are many men young and old that have been mistreated by the USA CIA zionists who will at least feel like some form of justice is happening, that's IF, be nice to see many in Bushs' administration exposed and tried accordingly, they may even bring George himself into it
