Israeli radar may track North Korean missiles

TEL AVIV: An Israeli-developed missile detection radar system called Green Pine is a leading candidate in South Korea's Defense Acquisition Program Administration (DAPA) for the country's independent low-tier missile shield, The Korea Times reported Monday.

"The DAPA concluded negotiations with foreign bidders over the selection of the early-warning radar systems last week and believes the Israeli radar is the most suitable for the country's theater missile shield in terms of price and capabilities," an unnamed source was quoted by the paper as saying. The Jerusalem Post could not independently confirm the Korea Times report. If bought, the Green Pine system would become operational in South Korea by 2012. Two sets are scheduled to be bought by 2010. The Green Pine system was developed by the Israeli company Elta, and the Israeli Defence Forces use it to guide the Arrow 2 Missile Defense system. courtesy the jerusalem post
