British bishop faces German probe for Holocaust denial

by: AFP Updated: 23/Jan/2009 17:26

Richard Williamson: 'I believe there were no gas chambers... I think that 200,000 to 300,000 Jews perished in Nazi concentration camps but none of them by gas chambers.'

BERLIN (AFP)---German prosecutors said Friday they had launched a probe against a controversial British bishop on suspicion of inciting racial hatred for comments he made about the Holocaust on Swedish television.

A spokesman for the public prosecutor's office in the southern city of Regensburg said it had opened an investigation against Richard Williamson, 68, for remarks he made in an interview broadcast this week.

"I believe there were no gas chambers... I think that 200,000 to 300,000 Jews perished in Nazi concentration camps but none of them by gas chambers," said Williamson during an interview with the SVT channel.

"There was not one Jew killed by the gas chambers. It was all lies, lies, lies!"

Six million Jews were murdered by Nazi Germany during World War II including vast numbers by systematic extermination in gas chambers.

This week, Pope Benedict XVI reportedly decided to cancel the excommunication of four bishops who were consecrated in 1998 by the conservative French bishop Marcel Lefebvre, including Williamson.

The pope has already signed the decree lifting the excommunication, which will be made public later in the week, according to the Italian report Thursday which the Vatican neither confirmed nor denied.

Lefebvre, who died in 1991, was excommunicated in 1988 by pope Jean Paul II for having consecrated the bishops in defiance of the Vatican's authority.

Since assuming office in April 2005, Benedict has made great efforts to heal the schism with the more traditionalist Catholic movement.

Lars-Goran Svensson, the Swedish programme's producer, said the interview had been pre-recorded in Germany last November and its airing at this time was "pure coincidence."

Bishop's Holocaust remarks spark outrage, threaten Jewish-Vatican ties

By The Associated Press

The Vatican's relations with Jews risked a new crisis Friday after an excommunicated British bishop - reportedly in line for rehabilitation - said that historical evidence "is hugely against 6 million Jews having been deliberately gassed" during World War II.

Two Italian newspapers reported Thursday that Pope Benedict XVI planned to lift the excommunication of Richard Williamson and three other bishops punished for having been consecrated without papal consent 20 years ago by the late French conservative Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre.

The Vatican declined to comment on the reports, but Vatican spokesman the Rev. Federico Lombardi suggested Friday that such a decree would be made public soon.

Rome's chief rabbi asked the Vatican to halt the reported rehabilitation.

Rabbi Ricardo Di Segni said it is "inconceivable" the pope didn't know Williamson's views.

The International Jewish Committee for Interreligious Consultation also urged that the excommunications of all four - and especially Williamson - not be lifted, saying they were all opposed to pursuing relations with Jews, Protestants and Muslims.

Vatican-Jewish relations have been already strained by Jewish criticism of World War II Pope Pius XII, accused by some of not speaking out in a bid to head off the Holocaust. Israeli officials recently took offense when a senior cardinal said Gaza under the Israeli offensive seemed like a "big concentration camp."

Williamson made his comments in an interview with Swedish state TV while in Germany in November; the broadcast was aired Wednesday night.

He said the Nazis did not use gas chambers.

"I believe that the historical evidence ... is hugely against 6 million Jews having been deliberately gassed in gas chambers as a deliberate policy of Adolf Hitler," he said.

He cited what he called the "most serious" revisionists who he said had concluded that "between 200,000-300,000 perished in Nazi concentration camps, but not one of them by gassing in a gas chamber."

Vatican officials declined Friday to comment on his remarks.

Lefebvre rebelled against the Vatican's modernizing reforms of the 1960s, which included reaching out to other religions and replacing Latin with local languages at Mass.

Benedict has already made a concession to Lefebvre's traditionalist Society of St. Pius X in the hope of bringing it back into the Church by making the old Latin Mass more readily available. Lifting the excommunications would satisfy another key demand of the group.

Williamson's remarks could bring him legal problems in Germany. State prosecutors in Regensburg opened a preliminary investigation about whether he broke German laws against Holocaust denial.

Think about it

by chestergimli on 24.01.2009 [14:24 ]

The state of Kentucky, USA is where I live. And I don't think that there are 6 million people in the whole of it. Lousiville where the Kentucky Derby is run is probably the largest, then comes Lexington. I can't imagine culling the entire population of my state. How in this world would you find a burial place for 6 million people in one country all at one time? They would have had to use their entire army just to bury them. Just imagine it. I believe that there were 6 million people killed in WWII totally. That is more believable to me.

I feel that the church is taking a stand a little at a time against the Jews. Hooray for Bishop Williamson. The true defenders of the faith are inching their way back in. Before the Jews were the disease eating away at the Catholic Church. Now it is the true Catholics who are the disease eating away at international Jewry.

Dose anyone think that the German government will try to extradite him?

The question can be resolved by counting

How many millions Jews perished precisely in the concentration camps (CC), how many crematoria in each CC, how long (hours) its take to burn one corpse to ashes, what fuel were used gasoline/gas/coal (kerosene, gasoline or gas are impossible for crematoria fuel in the CC during the war) when it did take place (1942-45 =  $3 \times 360 \times 24 = 25,920$  hours). These are variables that can be used to calculate the plausibility. Then how many gas chambers installed in each CC and how long (hours/day) its take to bring the corpses from gas chamber to crematoria, adding all these would gave the clues of the possibility that during 3 or 3.5 years that 6 M Jews were perished in the CC, and be published world wide that the holocaust in did happened.

In fact there were gas chambers...

by gmmonko on 25.01.2009 [00:01 ]

...but this were complete useless installation, so the people which were put to death that way suffocated in reality in this air tight rooms - the used gas didn't do anything to shorten the process.

A huge crowd of people in panic and pain ... anymore to tell?

Holocaust denial has two sides: the people who completely deny it, and the Jews who think they own it, neglecting the fact that the majority murdered during the Holocaust weren't Jewish.

The Jews playing the guilt trip on the expense of the silence of the other victims, and the Jews got also all restitution money.

the best argument against the "lethal gassings" is the total nonsensicality of the purported use of Zyklon B as a lethal gassing agent!

Zyklon B WAS used to delouse inmates' clothing, hence avoiding typhus plagues, but its utilisation involved special hot-air blower units (equipped with automatic can openers!), only a few of which existed in the Reich, in conjunction with industrial-strength extractor fans and small, concrete, 'bunker'-type rooms with sealed, gas-tight doors!.....none of this apparatus existed in the much-vaunted "crematoria";

HCN is also highly soluble in water....thus: a large room with several dozen people in a country like Poland, which had high rain-fall @ the time, and in a swampy area, would go a long way to negate the lethality of the granules....thus, the need for small, concrete rooms(preferably heated) with the industrial-strength extractor fans in operation!

(the only other means of using HCN is that previously employed by gas chambers in some US prisons...an hermitically-sealed, space-capsule-type room with the executee strapped into a chair and raw cyanide crystals dumped into a large bucket of sulphuric acid....hence producing the required amount of lethal gas!)

also: even a bank of modern gas-fired crematoria would be struggling to cremate the n° of corpses that were supposedly incinerated @ the 'Schwitz on a daily basis between 1942-1944!

the coke-fired crematoria in operation @ the 'Schwitz @ the time would have had NO HOPE!

The German public prosecutor has no authority

by gazza on 25.01.2009 [09:03 ]

The bishop is a british citizen who spoke in another country and not in Germany . This case is going to show how idiotic the german prosecutors . Those assholes think that they can intimidate people from different nationalities with their BS . I suggest to the good bishop to avoid visiting zionist Germany . There seem to be a widening gap between the EU politicians and the population less and less people believ now the Shoah FRAUD .

This is my calculation about Hollowcause

by djandjolic on 25.01.2009 [09:30 ]

6000,000 body perished in the concentration camps (CC), and there is 10 CC in and out side all Germany with 25 crematoria in each CC. Lets say it does take 5 hours to burned on the body to ashes with coal cokes as a fuel, and it happened from 1942-1944 and let says its 2.5 years (or  $2.5 \times 360 \times 24 = 21600$  hours). This simple data would give a result  $(6000,000 \times 5 \text{ hours}) : 250 \text{ crematoria} = 120,000 \text{ hours}$  to burned the bodies, and this would takes  $(120,000 \text{ hours} : 21,600 \text{ hour}) \times 1 \text{ year} = 5,55 \text{ years}$  to burned to ashes ( that is from 1942-middle of 1947) all the 6 million dead body simultaneously at in undisturbed 250 crematoria in 10 CC in the manner similar like in the industrial incinerator. This not counting time required (hours) to bring dead body from gas chambers to the crematoria by the malnutrition inmate not by the SS guards in the CC. This too not counting the number of coal cokes (tons) required that need to be proved too since kerosene, crude oil or gasoline and gas fuel were used by the Germany war machine. The conclusion is in did Hollowcauses happened during WW II in the Germany CC yr calculations are a good start.....but, also, consider these facts:

i/NO "death camps" were located in Germany proper (main-stream "historians" now acknowledge this!);

ii/the coke-fired crematoria would need "down time" & regular maintenance (probably: 10hrs in every 48 @ least!)

also, check out Germar Rudolf's book..."Dissecting the Holocaust"...

Pope Reinstates 9/11 Truth Bishop

By RACHEL DONADIO

... the Roman Catholic Church, revoked the excommunications of four schismatic bishops on Saturday, including one whose comments denying the Holocaust have provoked outrage.

The decision provided fresh fuel for critics who charge that Benedict's four-year-old papacy has increasingly moved in line with traditionalists who are hostile to the sweeping reforms of the Second Vatican Council in the 1960s that sought to create a more modern and open church.

A theologian who has grappled with the church's diminished status in a secular world, Benedict has sought to foster a more ardent, if smaller, church over one with looser faith.

But while the revocation may heal one internal rift, it may also open a broader wound, alienating the church's more liberal adherents and jeopardizing 50 years of Vatican efforts to ease tensions with Jewish groups.

Among the men reinstated Saturday was Richard Williamson, a British-born cleric who in an interview last week said he did not believe that six million Jews died in the Nazi gas chambers. He has also given interviews saying that the United States government staged the Sept. 11 attacks as a pretext to invade Afghanistan. ...

In a November interview broadcast on Swedish television last week and widely available on the Internet, the bishop said that he believed that "the historical evidence" was strongly against the conclusion that millions of Jews had been "deliberately gassed in gas chambers as a deliberate policy"...

Millions of Jews had been “deliberately gassed in gas chambers as a deliberate policy”...

by djandjolic on 25.01.2009 [15:32 ]

Yeep! agreed they died of starvation in the concentration camps mainly due to not enough food to feed them, as more foods are diverted to Germany soldier in the war front!.

Hollowcause did not happened by taking into consideration time consumed (hours) to bring inmate from barracks to gas chamber, time require (hours) to take them out of the gas chamber and bring them tothe crematoria, and down time (hrs) require for crematoria maintenances.

Adding all of these, it would be impossible for hollowcause as it said happened from 1942-middle of 1944. If coal cokes were used, how many tons were made available and allocated for the CC crematoria, since coal cokes were the primary source for steel making and production used for the war machine. Adding all the rough data its impossible too that such great number of coal cokes were made available only to burn the bodies other than steel production. The Nazi Germany is not deliberately kill the inmate purposely by mean of gas chamber.
