William Rodriguez, 9/11 Hero and the last man out of the Towers, with President George W. Bush at White House award ceremony; with Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad at a private 9/11 presentation.

“There was a huge explosion in the basement—several seconds before the plane hit the tower!”

By Richard Roepke

William “Willy” Rodriguez is the 9/11 hero who helped save hundreds of lives, and the last person to escape alive from the World Trade Center (WTC) Towers.

Inasmuch as the thrust of this narrative is meant to be about the honor, nobleness, and benevolence of heroism, be forewarned.

In its effort to reveal the essential goodness that resides in the hearts of most human beings, it also inexorably exposes the vilest evil that festers in the minds of a few.

Once past the heroism, this story begins to slice through the slimy underbelly of a vile, pathological beast that controls our lives, and gives us glimpses of the innards of this creature that grins gleefully at our gullibility and simple innocence while trampling on our most basic human rights.

This story is a wake-up call to the citizens of planet Earth.

Decorated Hero

Employed at the WTC for 19 years as a maintenance worker, Rodriguez was responsible for the upkeep and safety of the stairwells within the 110-storey North Tower. On the morning of 9/11, Rodriguez was the only person at the WTC site with the master key to the North Tower stairwell doors. [NB: For fire containment purposes, only doors on every fourth level were normally left

Follow Before It's News

In the immediate aftermath of the attacks, Rodriguez personally rescued fifteen injured persons from the WTC by leading—often carrying—them to safety. Having evacuated the injured from the basement levels, he rushed back into the tower and led firefighters up the stairwells. Unlocking doors to various floors as they ascended, he aided in the successful evacuation of unknown hundreds of survivors.

At great risk to his own life, Rodriguez re-entered the structure three times, and even rescued people trapped between floors in elevator cars by lowering ladders down into shafts. Having helped lead everyone he could find to safety, he finally decided to exit the building.

Rodriguez is believed to be the last person to leave the collapsing North Tower alive.

He survived the building's collapse by diving beneath a fire truck, where he lay trapped, completely buried in a mountain of dust and rubble for over two hours. Barely able to breathe, he thought he would "die for sure" under that truck where he was literally entombed.

An agnostic, he prayed for the first time in his adult life. As he now unshakably believes, God does listen to heartfelt prayers, and miracles do happen.

A policeman who had been standing across the street had caught a fleeting glimpse of Rodriguez as he leapt under the truck a split second before the tower collapsed in an avalanche of debris.

It was this officer who later returned with help believing that the man under that truck might still be alive.

Rodriguez has been spiritually transformed by this experience and has embraced his faith again with deep reverence.

For his outstanding heroism during America's desperate hour, William Rodriguez received a special commendation for valor from President George W. Bush at a special White House ceremony.

And that is the extent of the official story as it pertains to William Rodriguez's involvement relating to rescue efforts following the 9/11 attacks.

But, as you shall see, his incredible heroism was but the tip of the 9/11 iceberg.

"Bombs! Bombs!"

Heroism and accolades aside, what is truly incredible about Rodriguez's story is a shocking fact that has been concealed from public knowledge, and remains largely unknown to this day.

Rodriguez and a handful of co-workers who were down in the basement at the time of the attack, actually heard and felt huge explosions beneath their feet in the lower basement levels.

While this anomaly in itself should have been cause for serious investigation, it is the timing of these explosions that is extremely troubling:

They occurred several seconds before the first airplane impacted the tower.

The first of these explosions, which occurred about 7-8 seconds before the plane struck the tower was so powerful it literally threw Rodriguez upwards, clean off the floor, as parts of the false ceiling collapsed onto and around him.

Rodriguez heard and felt at least three explosions going off down in the basement levels within seconds of each other.

Absolute pandemonium broke out, with screams of "Bombs! Bombs!" rising above the din as terrified workers scattered in all directions, frantically seeking ways to escape.

[NB: There were a total of six basement levels. Level-2, immediately below Rodriguez's position and the apparent location of the first explosion, was a "Mechanical Floor"—a restricted access area.]

But the "bombs" were by no means confined to the basement levels.

During his subsequent rescue efforts on the upper floors, Rodriguez claims he heard explosions going off "all over the building."

Felipe David, a colleague, who was working at the far end of basement Level-1 across from Rodriguez, fell victim to the second explosion. David was walking towards a supply room when the entire wall suddenly exploded in front of him.

Burned beyond recognition, David managed to stagger towards Rodriguez when Willy took one look at the man and froze.

The skin on his face had almost completely peeled away exposing raw, pink flesh, and the burnt skin of his outstretched arms was hanging horrifically, "like sheets of loose cloth."

David was the first casualty whose life Rodriguez saved by carrying him up to paramedics at street level, after which he returned to the basement in spite of police orders.

The 9/11 Commission Hearing

At the closed-door 9/11 Commission hearing, Rodriguez testified under oath that explosions were going off in the basement of the North Tower before the first plane impacted the building.

He explained in great detail to the Commissioners the numerous cases of serious injuries he had personally witnessed that were caused by these explosions.

He even provided the panel with a list of firsthand witnesses to the explosions, people who were ready to testify under oath.

One of the individuals Rodriguez recommended the panel summon was his friend and fellow employee, John Mongello.

Mongello was in the lobby of the neighboring South Tower when the first aircraft plowed into the North Tower where Rodriguez was located.

It would be another sixteen minutes before the second aircraft would rip into the one Mongello was in.

Yet, within a minute of the first plane hitting the North Tower, an elevator in the South Tower exploded to smithereens right before his eyes!

Mongello and others were literally blown backwards by the blast, as people—many, horribly burned—began to run willy-nilly shrieking in pain, shock, and sheer terror. Thick, black smoke could be seen billowing out of the now exposed elevator shaft, and the pungent smell of “gunpowder” was very evident.

Again, just as with the North Tower, this explosion occurred inside a building that had not yet been struck by a plane!

How could a plane crashing into the North Tower possibly have caused elevators in the South Tower to explode?

The esteemed 9/11 Commission never bothered to ask.

Worse, and to his utter disbelief, Rodriguez later discovered that his statements were completely omitted from the official record. As a result, not one word of this decorated hero's startling testimony appeared in the much-ballyhooed 9/11 Commission Report, a document that continues to be touted as “the most detailed, definitive study of the events of 9/11.”

Furthermore, Rodriguez was told, quite emphatically, not to speak about the explosions to others until “further investigations” had been carried out. As the world knows, this has yet to happen.

As a result of much public pressure, the Commission's investigation records were finally made public—seven years later, in January 2009.

Rodriguez was stunned to find that his testimony was among those marked “restricted,” and thus inaccessible to the public. His crucial evidence remains restricted to this day.

Waking Up

Naturally, Rodriguez was flabbergasted by the Commission's clearly suspect actions, but anger at the subterfuge was soon eclipsed by his far deeper anxiety.

The bombs.

He was convinced beyond a doubt there were explosives planted within the Towers. The official explanation—jet fuel, which is simply kerosene—made no sense at all.

Besides, he had overheard many exchanges on firemen's two-way radios that day that confirmed virtually all the jet fuel had burned off, and the few remaining scattered fires looked like they could easily be knocked out.

He was convinced the explosions he had seen, felt, and heard that day were not caused by kerosene.

They were caused by deliberately positioned explosives.

What cemented his belief and reinforced it even further was something he saw on television the next day:

WTC building 7 collapsing into its footprint like a house of cards. In a matter of seconds. [1]

He had walked by that building numerous times. WTC7 was a 47-storey steel-framed skyscraper that was located a few hundred feet away from the Towers, and a plane had not even struck it. But, just like the Twin Towers, it, too, it suddenly collapsed into its own footprint.

The first thought that struck him was, “That building was a fortress. How could it just have fallen like that?”

Having experienced the explosions in the North Tower firsthand, and then having seen footage of Building 7 collapse in freefall, there were no doubts whatsoever left in his mind:

All three buildings were purposely demolished with explosives.

[NB: In regard to WTC7, the 9/11 Commission Report, again, mentioned absolutely nothing about this 47-storey skyscraper's sudden and unbelievable collapse. Nor did it mention a word about the numerous eyewitness accounts of multiple explosions within that building. Not one word. It was completely ignored.]

As to who might have planted the explosives, he was at a loss. He couldn't conceive how the alleged terrorists could have pulled it off; they couldn't possibly have gained access to these buildings. He was convinced there had to have been other players involved—insiders.

He found such a prospect not only ominous in the extreme, but also disorienting and confusing on many levels. Suddenly, nothing seemed to make sense. Only one thought consumed him.

Who were the killers?

Strange Recollections

Having worked at the WTC for close upon two decades, he obviously was very familiar with its general layout. The North Tower, in particular, was nigh a second home to him. An extremely affable fellow, Rodriguez had many friends in the WTC community. His days almost invariably began with breakfast with co-workers at the employees' cafeteria at Windows On The World, the elegant restaurant on the 107th floor.

Especially following the 1993 bombing, security in the towers was extremely tight. That was glaringly obvious wherever he went. So how did the culprits manage to gain access?

He started to look into the security company in charge of the WTC complex, Securacom, and was more than a little surprised by the identities of two of its top executives.

President George W. Bush's brother Marvin Bush and his cousin, Wirt Walker III, were both principals of the company. Further, he found this very same company was in charge of security at Dulles airport and United Airlines—both central to the attacks.

Brushing this curious connection aside as coincidence, he began to wonder about the practical difficulties the perpetrators would have encountered in gaining access to the buildings. He tried to recall having seen any suspicious people, or strange occurrences.

Pieces began to slowly come together.

He recalled seeing small teams of men in white "HazMat" coveralls busily moving about the building in the weeks preceding the attacks. Their presence didn't strike him as particularly odd at the time, except for the fact that they used the stairwells almost exclusively and avoided using the service elevators. But he now began to wonder about these men's real identities and true purpose.

One particularly bizarre incident snapped into focus, one that was so frightening he recalls it made his "hair stand up."

A few weeks prior to the attacks, he was working in a stairwell on the 34th floor, which he knew to be completely vacant. Suddenly, he heard the strangest sound—one he'd never heard inside the tower in his nearly twenty years there.

It was a powerful, ominous, "rumbling" sound of something extremely heavy being rolled about. It sounded like a "huge metal dumpster on steel wheels, containing something extremely heavy—tons—being rolled around" a floor that he knew to have been totally empty—devoid even of furniture.

Yet, Rodriguez categorically maintains there was "someone" on that floor moving some monstrous contraption about.

Oddly, he admits to having been gripped by intense fear at the time, but he was having difficulty verbalizing to me the exact nature of his apprehension. While this didn't strike me as having been a particularly inauspicious occurrence, it was clear he had been deeply affected by it. He immediately reported the incident to the main office, but was reassured it was a vacant floor.

Rodriguez was emphatic that he felt so frightened by this incident he didn't dare open the door to look inside because he literally feared for his life.

He intuitively sensed grave danger behind that door, and did his best to avoid the 34th floor thereafter.

[NB: It is worth considering that long-term occupancy (and thus control) of a whole floor would have granted occupants virtually unlimited and unobstructed access from all sides to the entire 47-column central core of the tower via the elevator shafts. By sequentially disabling individual elevators for 'servicing,' the occupants would have had clear access to the entire 1,350-ft central load-bearing core—from the topmost floor right down the 6th level basement sitting on bedrock.]

Willy does not strike me as a man who can be frightened very easily, and this one anecdote has always intrigued me. The emotions I saw in his eyes, and his body language as he was describing the event were real. I was left with no doubt that what he experienced that day was extremely frightening and deeply impressionable.

Man on a Mission

I first met Willy in 2004 when he was touring the country with millionaire philanthropist Jimmy Walter. Walter had recently awoken to 9/11 truth, and was an indomitable firebrand.

Frenziedly mass-producing DVDs, organizing public events and seminars, and doing everything he possibly could to get the message out to the world, he was a one-man tour de force on his own mission of truth.

Such was his fervor, he once even stood in a long protest outside the White House bearing a placard that read, "9/11 was an inside job." I recall being greatly impressed by the spectacle of such a wealthy, successful man willingly facing scorn and ridicule by going that far out on a limb in the service of a cause as incendiary as 9/11. Quite a guy, Jimmy.

Walter, seeing in Rodriguez the clear mark of authenticity, drive, and commitment, soon took Willy under his wing. Once the two teamed up, Rodriguez was telling his extraordinary story at various public gatherings that Walter was helping organize.

Willy had been "advised" by officials to keep to himself his "different" views on the events of that day, but that wasn't about to stop him. His deeply traumatic experience and the shocking anomalies he had witnessed simply would not allow him to keep from asking the kind of questions most found exceedingly "uncomfortable"—even outrageously 'unpatriotic.'

Dalliance with Politics

The White House ceremony had all but guaranteed his meteoric rise to stardom as a national hero. However, his newfound celebrity status would soon have its concomitant obligations.

More than a few high-ranking officials had advised him of the "sensitivity" of the times, and told him in no uncertain terms that it would be unwise for him to pursue his disquieting inquiries into "unfounded theories."

It was proving to be "very embarrassing."

Ironically, at the same time, there was also tremendous support and encouragement being lavished by these very same officials, soliciting his participation on an altogether different agenda: To promote "patriotic unity" and emphasize to the nation the dire need for America to strike back hard at the 'enemy.'

And things actually got rather intoxicating for a while.

Rodriguez the hero was soon inveigled with promises of political office in the Hispanic community, and carrots of all kinds were dangled before him.

He found the attempts to win him over by various Republican power-players to be almost overwhelming. The heady publicity had suddenly thrust him on the national stage, and he was deemed by Party strategists to be the ideal Republican candidate to woo the more than 30 million Hispanic voters in the country.

Charismatic, articulate, good-looking, fluently bi-lingual and a national hero to boot, he was a natural—the perfect political candidate.

Before joining the WTC staff, Rodriguez had worked for ten years as an aide to New York Governor Mario Cuomo, helping organize press conferences for high-level policy-making events, so he even had the basic political training already under his belt. [He also possessed stage panache to boot. An avid amateur magician, he had worked in his younger days as an assistant to The Amazing Randi.]

The Republican Party even made arrangements to send him to train for political office, and offered Rodriguez millions of dollars in campaign financing to run on the national Hispanic platform. For a brief while he was a rising star with stellar prospects.

But this titillating new potential career also carried with it a huge price—one, he soon discovered, that was in tension with his probity, and sense of righteousness and duty.

It didn't take him long to decide. He refused to be seduced into concealing a truth he believed the world absolutely needed to know.

There was no doubt in Rodriguez's mind that the official narrative re 9/11 was far from true. He believed it was his patriotic duty to alert his fellow Americans to what actually happened that terrible day. "I had to choose whether to tell the truth, or play their game," he told me. "I couldn't get myself to play their game."

Tempting as the alternatives were, the forces of truth had prevailed.

Celebrity No More

That pivotal decision caused all Republican encouragement and offers of political support to evaporate.

The decorated 9/11 hero was now quite suddenly not only a Party pariah, but also persona non grata in the halls of high power.

By taking his courageous stand, Rodriguez had unwittingly assumed a very dangerous role, one that would pose a direct threat to powers that lay behind the veneer of party politics.

He had just signed his own political death warrant.

Naturally, the muzzled media didn't appear willing to report any of what Rodriguez had to say. As always, they felt obliged to promote whatever the propaganda ministry wanted the masses to believe.

It takes enormous courage to go against such opposition, but that's the kind of man Willy is. He says he owes it to his many friends—more than two hundred of them—who were butchered that day by an evil shadowy group in pursuit of some diabolical geopolitical agenda.

energy and an admirable sense of purpose.

When I suggested it might be time for him to throttle back a notch, he responded, "I can't. I am driven because I have a need to find out who the real killers are. The alleged Arab hijackers couldn't possibly have rigged all those explosives. No way."

The Mission Goes Global

Jimmy Walter wasted no time financing a "9/11 Truth World Tour" to raise awareness about the 9/11 fraud by first taking the message across America and later around the world.

And money was no object. Not one to approach such a grand and noble undertaking with anything less than total commitment, Walter famously offered a $1 million cash reward to any engineer or scientist in the world who could prove, in an academic technical paper, that the three towers could have collapsed the way they did without explosives.

Despite massive national publicity—the million-dollar challenge was even sent to the engineering faculties of over 100 universities, as well as a host of major architectural and structural engineering firms—there were no takers.

None. Zero. The prize remains unclaimed to this day. [But is this surprising? How does one prove water isn't wet?]

Walter's group was comprised of a team of world-class experts: architects, engineers, pilots, firefighters, metallurgists, chemists, and psychologists, among others [2]. The group made a slew of public presentations in major cities across the US before moving on to Europe, and later, Venezuela, Singapore, Japan and elsewhere speaking to packed audiences everywhere they traveled.

Walter and Rodriguez even made private presentations to former Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad and Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez. They were surprised to find both these leaders were more than a little knowledgeable about the cover-up.

Willy told me that the home of Nicolas Maduro, president of the Venezuelan Assembly, was brimming with books, videos and documents about the 9/11 cover-up. Maduro, Venezuela's top legislator, intoned that he was ready to create an international investigative committee to look into the "international crime scene" that is 9/11, and that this would be structured via Chavez's government.

Walter and Rodriguez also appeared on every major Venezuelan television and radio station, both private and state-owned, and gave presentations to several universities. They were also scheduled to appear on Chavez's weekly broadcast 'Alo Presidente', but this was canceled at the last minute for unspecified reasons.

And things evidently got quite dicey during their trip. Rodriguez discovered that undercover FBI agents on the ground in Venezuela had asked the hotel where he and Walter were staying to turn over a list of names of residents. On hearing this, the Venezuelan National Assembly provided both men armed military protection for the entirety of their trip.

A Sudden Serious Setback

All of these valiant efforts by these two incredibly courageous men eventually amounted to naught. Quite unexpectedly, and inexplicably, all the energy, enthusiasm and momentum they had amassed suddenly appeared to have hit a brick wall.

They were informed, rather sheepishly by cohorts of the two leaders, that 9/11 was simply too big an issue to "rush into," and that it would be advisable to postpone further action to allow time for "more research."

Such is the awesome fear-inspiring power and global reach of the amorphous perpetrators of this monstrous crime.

Eventually, in utter frustration at his inability to make any real headway after over three years of tireless effort and colossal expense, and hampered by poor health, Jimmy Walter finally decided to call it a day.

That little adventure had cost Walter over $6 million of his personal money.

Jimmy's parting words to me, in 2007, embodied a truth that continues to resonate and gain currency as the years roll by:

"Trying to outdo the mainstream media by throwing a few million bucks around is like trying to outshine the sun with a flashgun."

It's hardly surprising you've heard nothing about these men's heroic initiatives on the local evening "news"—little more than bread and circuses, artfully packaged and insidiously seeded for consumption by the gullible, clueless masses.

Witnesses Begin to Drop Dead

It wasn't long afterwards that Rodriguez got his next wake-up call. Kenny Johanneman, another of Willy's close friends and former WTC colleague, had also been in the basement with him when the bombs were going off.

Willy, now working on behalf of the community of Hispanic victims, survivors and their families, had decided to contact everyone he knew who had been present at the WTC that day so he could record their personal experiences on video.

During a lengthy interview, Johanneman recounted his experience in great detail, holding back nothing. Johanneman, who had made it his personal mission to tell everyone he knew—and anyone else who'd listen—that he had seen “floors blow up in the basement before the plane hit,” appeared extremely eager (almost nervously so, Willy now recalls) to get his story on tape.

Three days after the interview, Rodriguez received the bad news.

Kenny Johanneman had suddenly “committed suicide.” Gunshot to the head.

This is frighteningly reminiscent of Barry Jennings, the former New York Housing Authority Emergency Coordinator and key 9/11 witness who suddenly died of unknown causes days before the release of NIST’s “amended” report on the collapse of WTC7.

Jennings is on record [3] stating, unequivocally and emphatically regarding Building 7, that “explosions were going off all over the place”—while the Twin Towers were still standing!

Jennings also stated during an interview that he was “stepping over bodies” in the main lobby of WTC7 as he was being led out by firemen. The lobby, he testified on video, “looked like a bomb had gone off inside it.”

Not only had no aircraft hit this building, the Twin Towers were still standing.

[NB: This is virtually identical to John Mongello’s testimony about elevators exploding in the South Tower before a plane even hit the building.]

Mr. Jennings, too, suffered a sudden and mysterious death at age 53.

Dylan Avery, a documentary producer, commissioned a private detective to investigate Jennings’ suspicious death (and the subsequent disappearance of his wife and two children). Within days the man returned Avery’s check to him and, giving no reason, refused to continue with the case.

The latest casualty in the long line of 9/11 expert witnesses to die under suspicious circumstances was Dutch demolition expert Danny Jawenko, president of Explosieve Demolitie BV, a leading Dutch controlled demolition company.

Having watched a video of WTC Building 7 suddenly fall at freefall speed, Mr. Jawenko had the courage to stand up and authoritatively assert [4] that he was “absolutely positive” WTC7 was brought down by controlled demolition.

On July 18, 2011, while driving home alone in his own car, Mr. Jawenko’s vehicle suddenly accelerated, swerved off the road and crashed into a tree at high speed.

Danny Jawenko was killed instantly.

The Mission Ratchets Up

During Rodriguez’s long crusade, he also contacted the FBI, but they never followed up on his reports. [It’s almost certain they did, but were probably allowed to take it only so far.] The same holds true with the mainstream media.

CNN spent a day interviewing Rodriguez at his home, but when it was broadcast the following day it had been thoroughly edited: they glamorized the heroic rescues and the White House tamasha, of course, but wholly excised anything pertaining to the explosions. It was a total whitewash.

Some reporters have subtly warned Rodriguez to keep quiet, as his outspokenness could jeopardize his life. “You don’t know whom you’re dealing with,” one major-network insider told him. But Willy had already defiantly looked death in the face and will probably continue to tell his story, damn the torpedoes.

He says he is speaking for his friends who were forever rendered speechless, and adds, “I am living on borrowed time; I probably should be dead anyway.”

It’s probably this do-or-die attitude that has imbued Rodriguez with the guts to take his dauntless campaign as far as he has.

How gutsy is he, and how far is he willing to go?

In 2004 Rodriguez was the lead plaintiff in a RICO lawsuit filed against President George W. Bush and 155 of his henchmen, accusing them of complicity in the 9/11 attacks, conspiracy to commit murder and other crimes.

This is hardly the behavior of a man afraid of getting whacked.

But don’t hold your breath waiting for a sensational courthouse drama with Dubya sweating it out in the hot seat. The court dismissed Rodriguez’s claims against the USA, DHS, and FEMA, and gave Rodriguez until July 7, 2006 to show cause why his lawsuit should not be dismissed with respect to the other 153 defendants. Due to a falling out with his attorney Rodriguez failed to do so, and the court dismissed the case.

But he’d be the first to tell you this was never about winning.

It was about getting the public to wake up to the facts about 9/11—the single most heinous crime and unconscionable fraud ever visited on the inhabitants of this planet.

Preparing For The 10th Anniversary

The 9/11 Truth movement is growing almost exponentially, with literally hundreds of groups active worldwide, and more blossoming by the day.

But this took a few years to get going.

So utterly overwhelming was the initial mainstream propaganda barrage, and so raw were people's emotions and sensitivities in the aftermath of the attacks, those who were quick to see through the fraud couldn't even begin to think of organizing a handful of local activists, let alone a worldwide network.

Gradually—and thanks almost entirely to the Internet—lines of communication began to open across the country and around the world, helping activists to organize, communicate, build cohesion, and spread the word to the millions still asleep.

It was only a matter of time before people would become aware of the mountains of shockingly obvious evidence that's freely available online—such as WTC7 in freefall. Common sense would then inevitably kick in and take over, helping them to pierce the veil of the official myth on their own. There is, after all, a limit to denial.

As a result of the steadfast efforts of thousand of dedicated activists, what began as a trickle is now fast reaching torrential proportions.

Reaching critical mass is no longer a distant hope. Especially given the millions waking up around the world to 9/11's offspring—the bogus 'war on terror', DHS, the militarized police state, the monumental Bankster fraud—critical mass re 9/11 is now imminent, and an absolute certainty.

Thousands of activists around the world are helping spread the 9/11 message via public presentations, free DVDs, and even huge highway billboards.

All too aware of the astonishing rise in public awareness, desperate operations are currently afoot by the 'powers that be' to counter this worrisome trend.

Major Hollywood stars—including Robert DeNiro—have been signed up to read the fairytale script pushing the 'Official Conspiracy Theory.' I.e., how nineteen clueless Arabs who, without tickets or boarding passes, climbed aboard four airliners, hijacked the craft using little box-cutters, and then brilliantly outwitted the most formidable military force on the planet and its entire multi-trillion-dollar defense apparatus for almost two hours—all without a single fighter interceptor in the fearsome American arsenal so much as turning a wheel for the entire duration.

This upcoming mass-media pageant, of course, will be further bolstered by the government's openly proclaimed—and ongoing—assault on 9/11 "conspiracy" groups.

Obama's regulatory Czar, Cass Sunstein, has officially initiated a nakedly aggressive program of "cognitive infiltration," an insidious initiative where government agent provocateurs have been ordered to covertly penetrate 9/11 truth movements and attempt to structurally disable these organizations from within by sowing disinformation.

One can only wonder why this kind of deep sabotage would be necessary—unless these "conspiracy nuts" now poses a real and present danger to the powers that be.

But, take heart, dear reader: although truth lives a wretched life, it outlives a lie every time.

Every time.

Besides, it would take a lot more than a covert program of "cognitive infiltration" to dismantle 9/11 truth—that would first require rewriting the laws of physics.

On the side of Truth, we have literally thousands of professional architects, engineers, firefighters, pilots, scientists, and other similar groups comprised of professionals with impeccable credentials who are planning their own public relations initiatives.

But, in a country where 78% of its citizens get 92% of their news from television, these groups have their work cut out for them.

Despite the challenges that lie ahead, I cannot bring myself to agree with Jimmy Walter's assessment that this would be an undertaking tantamount to "trying to outshine the sun with a flashgun."

Rather, I would prefer to invoke the wisdom of Victor Hugo:

"No army can stop an idea whose time has come."

The Power Of One

Meanwhile, there is one brave man packing a 'flashgun' who's working wonders on his own. And he dismisses defeat as an impossibility.

I was elated to discover that Willy Rodriguez's undiminished efforts are still in full swing, and about to reap rich rewards.

The man is on fire. He's been reeling off interviews with major media outlets around the world at a ferocious rate, gearing up for a full-blown one-man 10th anniversary assault on the Dark Force.

Rodriguez recently mentioned some of the interviews he already has in the bag:

Yomiuri Shinbun (Japan), Arbitron (worldwide), Shanghai Morning Post (China), Express News (Pakistan), Global National News (Canada), Telemondo (Latin America), Le Point (France), RT (Russia), Radio Television Espanola (Spain), Reuters, and CNN (again). There are many more in the works that will be ready by 9/11/12.

[NB: Willy was quick to mention he'd learnt a bitter lesson from his last encounter with CNN—now, he rattles off his responses as seamlessly as possible to deny cutting-room butchers their "edit points!"]

Rodriguez is also polishing up a brilliant new documentary all his own, "From The Rubble," which will also be released in time for the 10th anniversary. I watched the raw version last evening in its entirety.

It's a brilliant bit of work—profoundly emotive, incredibly detailed, fact-filled and chockablock with riveting interviews with WTC employees, firemen, police officers, paramedics and other first-responders. These are all rescuers who were there, hands-on, in the thick of it, and witnessed the entire tragedy firsthand.

Even in its current rough state, I can unreservedly state it's the most compelling 9/11 documentary I've seen to date.

Time To Give It Our All

Given the appalling trail of deaths of 9/11 witnesses over the past ten years, it would make sense that the best way to ensure the safety of surviving key witnesses like Rodriguez would, ironically, be for these individuals to continue to stay planted in the public spotlight.

Considering the serious threat these brave souls pose to the criminals at large, this might be the only strategy that could offer them a modicum of safety.

The more people who know about this brave man, and the many other men and women like him, the greater the chances of thwarting their 'suicides' or 'heart attacks.'

On behalf of every one in the 9/11 Truth movement; in memory of the three thousand Americans who perished needlessly on that tragic day; and the million-plus innocents who have been slaughtered (and continue to be massacred) in distant lands on account of this fiendish fraud; it would be fitting, proper, and necessary to conclude with a message to all those who have awoken to The Big Lie, yet choose to do nothing:

Silence is complicity.

Thank you for the post! A+
I think William Rodriguez IS a true American hero. And he should probably be in office somewhere, I know I'd vote for him.

One fact about this country that has always bothered me is that we spent 63 million dollars to investigate Bill Clinton's affairs and only One million to investigate the CRIME that is 9/11! It makes me want to cry.

911 was a false flag operation. Look up operation Operation Northwoods.
Information was release through the freedom of information act. Your government wants to control every part of ur life from birth to death.

Operation Northwoods was a series of false-flag proposals that originated within the United States government in 1962. The proposals called for the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), or other operatives, to commit acts of terrorism in U.S. cities and elsewhere. These acts of terrorism were to be blamed on Cuba in order to create public support for a war against that nation, which had recently become communist under Fidel Castro.[2] One part of Operation Northwoods was to "develop a Communist Cuban terror campaign in the Miami area, in other Florida cities and even in Washington."

Operation Northwoods proposals included hijackings and bombings followed by the introduction of phony evidence that would implicate the Cuban government. It stated:

"The desired resultant from the execution of this plan would be to place the United States in the apparent position of suffering defensible grievances from a rash and irresponsible government of Cuba and to develop an international image of a Cuban threat to peace in the Western Hemisphere."

Several other proposals were included within Operation Northwoods, including real or simulated actions against various U.S. military and civilian targets. The plan was drafted by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, signed by Chairman Lyman Lemnitzer and sent to the Secretary of Defense. Although part of the U.S. government's Cuban Project anti-communist initiative, Operation Northwoods was never officially accepted and the proposals included in the plan were never executed.

America The Prostrate

In a simplistic sort of way,
Across a desert lit by the moon.
America lay prostrate,
Lulled by prosperity's tune.

Beautiful thing in a world gone mad,
Everyone knows the lies being spoke.
They spill from the mouths of bankrupt souls,
Leaderless people, morally broke.

The globe spins on, a compact disc,
Television soothes the planet.
Hard drives quietly think away,
Politicians run the gamut.

Prostrate pricks, sucking away,
At America's aging tit.
Pay up now, or go to jail,
They care less, how you take the hit.

They act as if it will never end,
The Nazis felt much the same.
Fortify your home, your town,
These criminals have no real shame.

The knock on the door will surely come,
Midnight terror of the state.
Theft, lies, fraud and deceit,
Social incubators of pure hate.

"Rodriguez and a handful of co-workers who were down in the basement at the time of the attack, actually heard and felt huge explosions beneath their feet in the lower basement levels ... they occurred several seconds before the first airplane impacted the tower."

So, if they were in the basement, how would they know when the planes impacted the towers, down to the second?

He wasn't the last survivor out of the building (that was Jenelle Guzman-McMillan, who was rescued some 26 hours later at approximately 12:30 p.m. on September 12, 2001.

Many reports indicate burning jet fuel was pushed down the elevator shafts and caused injuries and damage. To then take that fact and twist it to mean something it doesn't is just thoughtless gullibility.

.....you are either a troll or an idiot,....dozens of other witnesses collaborate the events described in this story,...you can see in the video that virtually all of the jet fuel went up in a huge ball of fire upon impact,....and how would jet fuel fall down the elevator shafts,...causing explosions 8 seconds before the impact of any plane? And, I'm quite sure you could feel the impact of the plane, no matter your location in the building!

The key question for folks like you,...are you purposefully acting stupid,...or how much more proof do you need that at a minimum,

Accounts from Rodriguez could be read mere weeks after the towers came down. People like Mutant_Truth are laughable, as they cling to the official story of jet fuel imploding buildings in freefall. And building 7, where there were only sporadic fires, none from jet fuel or a plane? How did that one also come down in imploded fashion upon its own footprint? See video of the Pentagon? No plane parts on the lawn in front of the building, and a nice round hole in the building. Where did the wings go? Oops.....there were no wings, 'cause there was no plane! A missile made that hole. To believe that a group of ragtag Arabs with box cutters, who had to pass a test in Osama's field maneuver, a jet into the Pentagon is the height of gullibility. By International Center for 9/11 Studies
Published: Monday, Aug. 8, 2011 - 7:07 am

TORONTO, Aug. 8, 2011 -- /PRNewswire-USNewswire/ --

A decade after the events of September 11, 2001, which resulted in the immediate deaths of nearly 3,000 people on American soil, countless victims from toxic dust, and hundreds of thousands of deaths in Afghanistan and Iraq, international hearings on this pivotal event will begin in Toronto in September.

The events of September 11 provided a pretext for a War on Terror that has led to military invasions and occupations, and attacks upon civil and human rights throughout the world. The credibility of the official investigation into the events of September 11, 2001, carried out by the U.S. Government between 2003 and 2005, has been questioned by millions of citizens in the United States and abroad, including victim family members, expert witnesses and international legal experts.

To date, open and transparent judicial hearings to question the official evidence provided by the U.S. Government have never taken place in the United States or abroad. Similarly, no perpetrators of the events of September 11 have ever been brought to justice on American soil.

A group of international citizens has therefore undertaken to privately fund and cause these independent hearings to take place. Because of the global ramifications of the events of 9/11, the initiators of this inquest have opted to select an international location outside of the United States for these hearings to proceed. The city of Toronto, Canada was chosen as an ideal "international" location because of its proximity to New York, Washington and Shanksville (the crime scenes).

Sponsored by the International Center for 9/11 Studies, the first four days of these hearings will take place at Toronto's Ryerson University between September 8 and 11, 2011. During these proceedings, which will be broadcasted live via the Internet, various expert witnesses will present evidence into the case.

Private funding to carry out these initial hearings is being provided by citizens from around the world. Limited seating to attend the hearings is also available. The Toronto Hearings will be moderated by Dr.

Michael Keefe (Canada) and Dr. Shabbir H. Khan (United States) and the final report will be edited by American attorney James Gourley.

This is possible but I think that 'terrorists' were the ones in the white suits. Remember they have been around for quite a few years without being detected. They did this to insure if the plane missed they could bring the building down. The terrorists have been undetected for years here doing alot of work. The WH is full of them. What better camo than asmat uniforms to be not noticed.

Posted by AusKivi on Thursday, 11 August 2011 10:54

There is a much more shocking truth about 9/11 not discussed in this article. In addition to the conventional explosives, there were also nuclear demolition charges buried deep below the building, which triggered the final collapses of the the 3 buildings, WTC 1, 2 and 7. For more information on this use the search term "Dimitri Khalezov nuclear demolition" on Google, and the same term on Youtube for the video. In fact, without the massive shockwave created by the nuclear charges the buildings may have been severely damaged, but would not have collapsed in a cloud of dust as we saw on our TV screens.

Good article. 9-11 was an inside job for sure. I've had confidence since the day it happened that it was so obvious that most people would be forced to wake up. Their waking up has pushed the extinction agenda ahead. But, better to die smart than stupid.

Posted by Anonymous on Thursday, 11 August 2011 3:57

See Activist Post: Architects and Engineers Question...Comments section for details about the preexisting computerized demolition system and the repriming or retriggering that went on just before 9-11. The retriggering perps also clumsily loaded WTC 6. Nukes were installed by a partnership and the whole mess was signed odfff on by a cabal of zionists who had attained all the necessary seats of authority. I have known of the setups for over 40 years, as have a number of engineers and managers and developers. The painters did NOT KNOW what they were spraying on other than it was a metal primer.

Yes, it was a self-centered stupid bloody thing to do that intentionally caused the deaths of over 3,000 people through the retriggering. Chris Bollyn and Jeff Prager can fill you in on the rest.

Posted by Dust on Thursday, 11 August 2011 5:41

I have been in the controlled demolition business and knew from the start by the way the buildings fell that it was done by shaped charges in a controlled fashion, what went on that day was evident from the start for me. Telling other people, even my family has been a up hill battle with very negative responses. I have not talked to my brother and one sister for four years because of my view on 9/11, there choice not mine I am sorry to say. Some people need to be publicly executed for their role in the worst event in American history and the day I and others lost any faith or hope for our government. We the People need to tear it down and remove all of the politicians who did it or turned a blind eye to the facts and gave any type of shelter to those who did this. That would include all CIA, DOD, FBI, current president, vice president and all members of the senate and congress. They all know the truth and remain silent.

Posted by Anonymous on Thursday, 11 August 2011 6:31

I guess these bullshit stories keep living. It is called the sonic wave blasts created from fuel igniting while traveling down the multiple elevator shafts to the basement level. As for the building falling the way it did is simple. The design of the building there were no interior support walls all floors were supported by the 4 outside walls. Once the integrity of an upper floor from heat etc. is breached it would normally drop or fall within the confines of the four walls around it. This in turn would create a domino effect pushing the floor below to fall due to the max. weight allowance being breached well beyond it's build tolerance thus the downward domino effect. Because most the outer shell all the way up contained a lot of glass windows if a blast was to occur in the basement many of the windows on the first few floors would have been blown outward or at least cracked as in the first world trade center blast. Smoke coming out of the ground exhaust vents was from fuel burning that traveled down the elevator shaft. Sorry the conspiracy won't hold up, people need to get a life of get educated about physics and stuff around them before they fall into the lost sheep followers club.

Posted by Anonymous on Thursday, 11 August 2011 6:48

Dust you might want to reconsider getting back to your sister and brother after four years. When it comes to controlled demolition I will guarantee that you or anybody who ever lived has ever used explosives on high rise structure that only have outer support walls holding the floors above. As controlled demolition rules would change completely under such structures. There was only ever built four buildings that way in the world. The twin towers and two smaller towers elsewhere.

The twin towers could be taken down easier without explosives from simply unlatching the support pegs/brackets on the top floor causing the floor to fall to the floor below breaching the weight allowance many times creating the same domino effect. No explosives needed. A very unique design that would also allow for clean tear down by choppers if ever needed.

 Interesting to see the same broken-English trolls out in every comment section regarding 911truth. Having traveled the world teaching technical issues to all kinds of foreign language students I've learned to discern the origin by the way they misspeak in English. Here's a consistent and perfect example:

""When it comes to controlled demolition I will guarantee that you or anybody who ever lived has ever used explosives on high rise structure that only have outer support walls holding the floors above.""

Not only does a sentence like that contain patently false information, ie , "only have outer support walls holding the floors" (see 'freedom's reference on the massive Core construction), but also these trolls just can't seem to get a grip on basic high school English grammar, punctuation, spelling or sentence structure while consistently making the exact same errors! It's strikingly like they are all employed out of the same facility without any American-born, original English-educated outsiders in their midst. I know of only one dedicated group in the world dedicated to internet comment boards who break their English and the facts of 9/11 like this. I'll let you fill in the blank.

Regarding their tired "pancake" argument, referred to here as "domino" (new English word for it here), I had to laugh once again. Visible in EVERY video of twin tower collapses is the disappearing upper block that supposedly crushes the in tact lower 80+ floor steel structures. The upper block is blasting outward above the impact zone, without moving below that impact zone, while the very top is descending at near free-fall acceleration! By the time the demolition wave begins to move below the impact zone, particularly in the North Tower, there is very little left of the upper block to crush anything below it. A few stories further and there is nothing left.

What was crushing floors 1 through 70? Ah, that must have been the jet fuel running down the elevator shafts!

You see the troll's argument for what it is: While "only outer support walls" were holding the building up, "jet fuel running down the elevator shafts" in the middle of the building brought them down like "domino" shaped pancakes... really sharp minds there!

 The basement explosions started with one very large explosion seconds BEFORE The plane strike, the lobby 95 floors below in one of the strikes, looked as if it was bombed. It was, even multiple times, people were injured and killed in those explosions, multiple explosions, are preliminary inner structuralpeppering to prepare the basement, for the contents of the demolished and pulverized building which would soon follow.

An indication, was the shoring walls, which previously held under the building, were moved a number of feet.

The last series of these internal prep explosions also preceeded the final demolition by seconds, then the final timed sequence of explosions pulverized the tower by floor, which sheered the inner steel columns, which itself is an inner grid of over 80 steel grids and columns, in an interior interior structure loke an inner building itself, these were "walked" inward, and downward, piling into dust and semi flatbed sized chunks of steel, convenient for a very fast clean up.

hey J.F.K. LOVING YOUR WORK...WHAT A COMPLETE MORON

how can you say there were no stairwells in the WTC. Truth is a serious subject but every now and then it is great to have a giggle at people like yourself. Just so you know, no-one is ever swayed by this dis-info. Amused yes, occasionally irritated, certainly. made to question the data vased in hard cold undeniable facts, no mate, not even a little bit.

Why am i reposting the same video that i have posted many times before? Well after a decade of working on truth issues i find this single video has more proof than a thousand hours of scientific discussion on the aftermath. This single short documentary on the construction of the WTC has awoken more people that i have communicated with than any other. Understanding how the buildings were built simply shuts the door

911 was without question a horrific tragedy to us all, that's a given. However, it was also a godsend to the power elite in Washington D.C at the time too. We Americans stood by helplessly and watched history unfold thus, taking 90% of our inherited freedoms with it when the dust finally settled. Mr. Rodriguez is probably correct, for it would've been quite easy for someone a few blocks away holding an (UHF-scan-lock-multifrequency-remote detonator) to trigger several downstairs bombs just seconds before the first plane struck.

After losing some friends in the second tower collapse I diligently watched the 911 commission coverage from beginning to end. Many times during that most irritating nonsense I yelled loudly at my TV set. At times threatening the innocent device with a half empty pop can because, I just couldn't believe the absolute stupidity of that so-called investigation. the disconnect from reality in all those faces while Mr. Rodriguez gave his testimony. When it was finally over the verdict came as no surprise...

Personally speaking, I believe 911 was an inside job cleverly conceived by a power mad runaway government who wanted to exercise total control over all peasants/citizens. Just look at that "Freedom Diminishing Legislation" that quickly followed those so-called terrorist's attacks. Homeland Security? Ah, sounds a bit like Germany's "Fatherland" to me. Thus, the key question we all should be asking here should focus around this one word, "Responsibility."

Did anybody in that intelligence gathering sector lose a position? Like fired for doing an incompetent job? Of course not. That should be considered the smoking gun here, that no one lost a high status position as a direct result of the worst so-called terrorist attack in America's short-lived history. Some did ask, where was our Air Force when these planes were being hijacked and used as missiles? Better yet, why wasn't there at least one General charged with insubordination?

Rest my case

The most damning thing to the conspiracy theory is the total lack of even one insider's revelation or testimony from such an insider. I'd imagine they're all dead by now. Accidents and sudden illnesses, you know.

J.F.K. i am not sure what you are saying? Seriously, are you asking where are all the contents? Are you wondering how all these objects were pulverised into very small pieces? or are you just being a parrot with no ability for independant thought and do not choose to see the physical proof in front of your eyes.

What is your point? Your post makes no sense.

Back to the missing contents.....
20,000 stainless steel elevatordoors

300 miles stainless steel elevatorcables
200 big elevator engines
200 counterweights for the elevators
And finally 3 stairwells for WTC 1 and 3 stairwells for WTC 2.
Now i have mentioned the stair wells. wink

J.F.K. You still make no sense. Are you saying because, according to you and despite the publicly available tenancy list, the towers were empty and this means the official story is true.?

what do publishing long lists of contents mean to you and what are they meant to portray to everyone else? It is great you know how to copy and paste but what is it meant to show?

We who work in the truth movement would love to hear your declared position. One day you seem to be pro-official story, and believe the Towers 'fell down'. On another day you seem to be anti-official story and appear to question everything. Either talk to your doctor and adjust the meds or simply state what side of the fence you want to be on. Do you believe in Truth or are you a supporter of the Official lies. Be honest and tell us, please.

The 911 conference in Toronto will never take place."They" cannot afford the truth to come out. Something BIG will happen to prevent it & divert people away from taking part. Maybe to one or more of the speakers having an "accident" could be a terrorist attack almost anything to stop it. The people running it should plan for this event & have contingency plans another venue extra unannounced speakers,(names not announced in advance who will be taking part) with transcripts of original ones who did not make it. Everything in duplicate & triplicate. People in organisation should only know things on a need to know basis as "they" may have infiltrated at a high level. Information not passed on until last minute. The people taking part who would supply this information to "them" may have been compromised or family's put under threat of been given/promised money amount like winning the lottery. This information is too important to be suppressed. I also suggest a short video film with the " you are seeing this because I was killed without being able to speak ,start" with relevant facts given to a few people they trust who are not involved with project, put on YouTube & as many other sites as possible should "something" happen. I know nothing about all the stuff apart from what I have read & will not be going to or having anything to do with conference apart from watching in the media, It is just that I know how these people think & do things. Good luck!

We who work???

Like i said before, my eyes are open! How about yours? But, don't bother, like i said, it's crystalclear to me!

Here another copy and paste job.[some quotes from a article]

Having said all of that, regardless of our own intellectual capabilities, we all know instinctively that a plan of mass murder of 3000 fellow citizens and Americans involves huge political risk. And having 5,000 years of learning experience, they knew full well as do we all, that whatever can go wrong, will go wrong. For prime examples of this, see our stories and articles on William Rodriguez, Harry Roland, Bill Heitman and Denarious Jaunita. You see, it isn't that the Ruling class has a problem with mass murder, or even the mass murder of 3000 of it's own citizens. As under either scenario above we know that the purpose of the event was to hijack the U.S and Western Militaries, and go to Afghanistan and Iraq to perform in essence a genocide of monstrous proportions.

The former theory is that supported by every card carrying member of the 911 truth movement. From David Ray Griffin, all the way down the crazed and mentally disturbed Alex Jones. And all others in between, even our beloved and not so teflon super hero, Willie Rodriguez. As a matter of fact, it is actually a tenet of faith of the 911 truth movement, that you not only embrace the ridiculous theory that the day was a day of mass murder, but that you not deviate from this, even .0033%. Or what amounts to one victim. When I say tenet of faith, I mean exactly that. With no way in the world to prove a real victim of 9/11, we must take their word at it and take it by faith. Thus it becomes a religion unto itself. Consider this if you will. In a day which claimed 3000 American lives, what death did you see? What death did you witness? None. Only that of the jumpers, and no examination was ever possible of remains. Again, the only death we saw on a day which claimed thousands, is that.

[....]

Has anyone else noticed how the entire 911 truth movement has been taken over and co-opted by PHD's and Big Money? And that it is these same PHD's and big money which then proclaim to us that the real problem with 911 is that we have no credibility? Does anyone else see the self contained contradiction there? You see, this is a very clever ruse, of which they are all playing on you. They feed you the idea we lack credibility. Not so. There isn't even any such thing as credibility. It doesn't exist in any tangible form anywhere on this entire planet. And anyone with a 7th grade education knows this or should know it. There is fact and fiction though. Truth and lies. Truth is credibility, regardless of the person or messenger who carries it.

If we are looking at a 30+ year conspiracy, and we are, then we are also looking at a truth movement which was conceived of, built, structured and put into place before 911 and immediately afterward. Instant breakfast, drive through car washes and ready made truth movements. Does anyone who has been here since the beginning ever wonder the speed at which the 911 truth movement was born? It went up so quickly, it is hard to imagine that it wasn't ever here before 911. It went up nearly as quickly as the towers came down. And there was obvious reasons for this, many of which are obvious to the reader. But one of the bigger reasons for this is because if they had not done this, they would have lost control before they ever had it.

You should read the rest of this article, it's a fair and good read and does makes sence to me!
<http://letsrollforums.com/9-11-truth-movement-t24752.html>

Nothing but hate between some truthmovements, looks like it's all about the money now, isn't it.

I did recieve an email from someone 6 weeks ago. I use a small part of it, because the writher is known to me and wish to be anonymus.

"I have been researching Luke Rudkowski and his true identity. I have reason to believe that he is some type of plant in the truth movement set undermine it and to provide info on people to govt higher ups."
[....]
"I do not believe Lukasz Milewski existed as the person being portryed as dead in the wtc."

And you worked in "A" truthmovement?

Truther Luke versus Luke who worked in the WTC?
Get it?
Thruther Badillo versus T J Sgroi his uncle who worked in the WTC?
Get it now??
Badillo and Rodriguez are close buddies.
Still don't get it???

SAYS ENOUGH.... and I rest my case also!

The next time you struggle to comprehend how someone could spend their time trolling the internet in order to defend and downplay whatever government cover-up or abuse is in the news, consider the fact that they may be on a government payroll.

Posted by freedom on Sunday, 14 August 2011 8:26

so if i understand it right, j.f.k. is saying the Truth movement itself is a lie created to spread dis-info ok, that pretty much states his position i guess. Good to know that the dis-info agents have certainly reached desperate new lows..

the logic circuits certainly have burnt out on his datamine have you really thought that through j.f.k.? The truth movement is a group of people from wide and varied sources, situations and lives, most of which have few if any regular communication but are bound by simple and honest desires to question the science behind the events described in the official story and eventually achieve the goal of a new investigation.

I am surmising you are an American, as such you possibly fall under the illusion that America is the be all and end all of anything and everything and have little knowledge of what is actually happening out in the rest of the world. Take NZ for example, a small country but we have many active Truth workers and they are spread across the country, never really get time together yet continue to function without our scripts that you allude to..

One more little thing to remember j.f.k. there are a large number of events from that day that have little if any relation with the WTC. Share This Story

Now I sincerely apologise for earlier using the word moron, i should have used the more appropriate form of moronic, as in your views, though apparently earnest are moronic. I should not have directed it to you personally and for that i do apologise.

and yes many people work in the truth movement, it does not mean we get paid, it does not mean it is a covert organisation that just appeared from nowhere. It is what happens when people with small and very finite resources decide to do something together that involves more than spending their days on websites splitting hairs to create unnecessary tension.

Of course there may be people who have been planted in the movement since its inception but if there were not then 'they' would not be doing their job. it is part of any resistance to deal with agent-provocateurs and deal with them we do, every single day.

there is a meeting down here in NZ, in a few hours, with people planning a number of screenings for the 10th anniversary i wll let them know they are all just pawns in a game designed by better minds shall i?

the sooner you look beyond the Towers as your bastion of proof the sooner your obvious passion may find real focus and direction. Though you may want to share your views on WTC7 which i notice is always absent from your comments.

i wish you well and i wish you peace in your efforts. the rest of us will, if you don't mind, carry on working for Truth.
