US Media Remains Mute on ‘Already-Confirmed’ Operations

FLASHBACK: US Special Forces Mass On Syrian Border

It’s now been exactly 24 days since I reported on the ongoing joint US-NATO secret training camp in the US Air Force base in Incirlik, Turkey, which began operations in April- May 2011 to organize and expand the dissident base in Syria. I broke that story on November 21, here at Boiling Frogs Post, based on information provided to me by multiple sources including highly credible insiders in Turkey and government insiders here in the US. 18 days later Iranian Press TV ran the story with further confirmation based on intensive coverage and confirmation by the Turkish media. Impressively, despite far more serious pressure from the government, reporters in Turkey provided detailed coverage of the story I broke here in the US.

One extensively reported story had to do with BBC reporter John Simpson, who went to Turkey to follow up on the story we broke at Boiling Frogs Post, but was placed under surveillance, prevented from following up on the story of the US-NATO-Turkish-Syrian Rebel operation Center in Southern Turkey, stopped from interviewing Riad al Assad, and how BBC quickly excused the scandalous incident. Every major newspaper in Turkey covered this event. Sabah and Radikal were among dozens of TV and newspaper outlets in Turkey covering it.

Here is the spin placed on the story by BBC to make the incident look like ‘protecting Colonel Riad al Assad’ [All Emphasis Mine]:

The colonel's name sounds close to but not quite the same as that of the President he wants to overthrow, Bashar al-Assad. He is based in a refugee camp at Apaydin, 9 miles (14km) from the town of Antakya and very close to the Syrian border. But he is not allowed to leave the camp, and cannot receive visitors.

*To a considerable extent, this is for his own protection. The Turks seem to regard Colonel Asad as a potentially important figure for the future, and are determined that nothing untoward should happen to him.

*As a result, getting to see Colonel Asad is remarkably difficult. No Turkish official wanted to help us, or indeed even speak about him on the record.

As we were filming his camp from a distance a group of Turkish soldiers briefly detained us. Yet the colonel is predictably keen to talk, and in the end we interviewed him via the internet.

To recap, 24 days ago Boiling Frogs Post broke the story on the US-NATO-Syrian Rebel Operation-Command Center in the US Air Base in Southern Turkey operating since May 2011. This story was first provided to all major US media, think NY Times, Washington Post, but no one was allowed to report due to 'US government pressure.' After we broke the story here at BFP, the Turkish media dared their government-military, and provided further confirmation and details. The story has since received coverage and confirmation by foreign publications such as Press TV and Russia TV. Still, not a peep in the US media, and that includes the corporate-foundation backed phony, aka Alternative Media.

Russia TV had good coverage on the latest here. And here is a Russia TV interview with James Corbett from Today:

A former official from within the ranks of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is reporting that US and NATO forces have landed outside of Syria and are training militants to overthrow the regime of President Bashar al-Assad....of course Whistleblower Sibel Edmonds, formerly a translator with the FBI..According to her, several sources internationally have confirmed the news, although the US media has been instructed to temporarily censor itself from reporting the news....Additionally, Edmonds says that American and NATO forces are training Turkish troops as well, to possibly launch a strike from the north of Syria....Ah...the irony of Americans having to get their news From Russia Today...lol...damn they’re moving quickly, aren’t they? George Bush is probably even envious....hahahahaha So should Americans enlist before they get drafted or what? Is there an SEO division in the military ?

I asked 1 of my colleagues who approved of police violence against protesters like the Greek,

What would you do if your salary gets an extra 30% tax next year and you will not be able to pay the rent for your house anymore??? Are you personally to blame for the financial crisis??

So why be punished for it?!?!?

If Syria has a big bomb this might be time to make use of it before it's too late. I wish our troops weren't fighting for our enemies. wake up service people, you are being double crossed.

“since I reported” and “I broke that story” and “story I broke ” and “story we broke” and “we broke the story”

This “journalist” has no credibility and will do anything to self promote themselves and their “paper”.
