CAMPAIGN 2012

Apparent Google Glitch Shows New Hampshire Primary Results

Updated: January 10, 2012 | 9:08 a.m. January 10, 2012 | 7:03 a.m.

An apparent Tuesday morning glitch had Google displaying results -- with 100 percent of precincts reporting -- for Tuesday's New Hampshire pri

The results, sourced to the Associated Press and displayed alongside searches for GOP hopefuls Mitt Romney and Buddy Roemer (and presumably in sixth place, behind Newt Gingrich, Rick Santorum, Ron Paul, Jon Huntsman and Michele Bachmann, who ended her campaign after last week' by a wide margin.

When the votes actually DO come in someone should check to see how closely the final tally matches Google's "sneak peek".

Your vote is steering the country

Democrats don't mind war as long as they can have big government. Republicans don't mind big government as long as they can have war.
If you believe in small government, then you shouldn't be in the White House.
